As for the petroleum, Mr. Leden said, the Eskimos objected seriously to the smell of the oil, although they were accustomed to strong odors. Eskimos, he explained, never take a bath. He declined to give an idea of the locality of the gold deposits other than to say: "It would have taken me two years more to have gone where the gold is." Mr. Leden travelled with tribes of Eskimos for three years, principally to study the native music, which was neither major nor minor

DEATH FOLLOWS BRAVERY.

Sergt. H. S. Hayes Won Medal and

Died Without Knowing. Sergt. Harry S. Hayes, of Trenton, the popular graduate and athlete of the University of Toronto, who was killed in action last month, performed a very gallant deed a few days before he fell, for which he was awarded the Military Medal. The following letter received by his father, Mr. H. W. Hayes, of Trenton, from Major E. C. Hall, gives details Promising Youth-You can go of his bravery and his death: "I know how inadequate it is for a father about the loss of his son, but please don't look upon me as an outsider, as your son in the short time we were together installed himself in my thoughts. Giving Him Confidence.

It was his 'rst campaign, his first poliitcal speech even. Although the county committee had sent him into a rural district to try out his oratorical wings, he was encouraged by the warm welcome of the local committee that were evident on all sides. There was even a band that played on the stand in the public square for half an hour before the speech.
