

Roll of Honor Durham and District

This list is intended to contain the names of all those who have enlisted from Durham and vicinity for service overseas. In it will be found the names of some who have since been discharged as medically unfit, or for other cause. Our object in publishing this list is to show who of our citizens have actually worn the khaki, and we have made no effort to include any who have applied and have been rejected. There will no doubt be mistakes—omissions may have been made, or other errors crept in, and we ask the assistance of our readers, and those who have members of their family at the front to make the necessary corrections. We would like the name of every enlisted man from this district on this list.

ABERDEEN.
 Mr. W. Edge left last week for the west.
 Mr. and Mrs. A. Ashley, accompanied by Miss Barbara Smith, attended Hanover Show on Friday.
 Miss Bertha Putherbough has returned to Toronto, after spending the summer with her parents here.
 Messrs. Roy and Sterling Lamb wheeled to Hanover on Sunday and spent the day with their uncle, Mr. F. Tizzard.
 Master Willie Crozier, of Allan Park, visited friends around here on Sunday.
 Messrs. McLean, McCracken, McDonald, Lamb and Clark have sold a fine bunch of fat cattle to Mr. R. Brunt.
 She Was Troubled.
 Mrs. A—Are you troubled much in your neighborhood with borrowing?
 Mrs. B—Yes, a good deal. My neighbors never seem to have anything I want.

LABOR AND THE LABOR UNIONS NOT AGAINST CONSCRIPTION

The following letter appeared recently in the Toronto Daily News. It is from the pen of Bernard Ross, of Montreal, and deals with the war from the viewpoint of the labor unions generally. He and the big majority of labor men throughout Canada resent the utterances of James Watters, who professes to be the official representative, and James Simpson, of Toronto, who under Labor's cloak, is seeking to advance the opinions of his particular cult of Socialism. The following is the letter:

Pacifists, anti-conscriptio nists, lose-the-war politicians and others of that ilk, have counted largely upon the opposition of Labor to the selective draft in their expectations of the Government changing its attitude and suspending the enforcement of the law. Several of the so-called spokesmen of the working class and organized labor, have criticized the law, saying that Labor, as a whole, was against it. They wished to make the public believe that organized Labor and the working classes are by no means interested in the overthrowing of the Kaiser and the military party. Some who proclaim themselves Socialists have stated that the present war is a capitalists' war, entirely overlooking in their absurd reasonings and conclusions that Gustave Herve, the world's greatest anti-militarist, is heart and soul in the present conflict and one of the most bitter critics, not only of the German military machine but also of the German Socialist party.

Interests of Working Class.
 Those who court notoriety in the name of Labor by denouncing the Government and those who opposed this measure, have endeavored to prove that in promoting the welfare of one's country, the working classes are not interested; in other words, if the Central Empires were victorious that the workmen, organized and unorganized, in democratic countries would have the same rights and legislative opportunities of improving their material welfare, as they have under the beneficent form of government that exists in countries where the source of all power is the people.

Although legislation cannot do away with the natural inequalities due to heredity or that mental or physical superiority that is the creator of distinctions, constitutionally governed countries provide the machinery whereby masses may if they see fit to exercise their power, bring about a levelling that makes it more or less impossible for a chosen few to exploit the rest of their fellow men.

In British Parliament.
 No country in the world is better exemplification of this than Great Britain. Although the representatives of Labor in the British Parliament are few in number, they wield an influence far greater than their number would entitle them to, were it not for the fact that their fellow members in Parliament recognize that while their numerical standing is small, they nevertheless speak on behalf of millions.

The English workman is practical. He dreams not of an economic paradise where man does not labor or spin, but is sensible enough to understand that all effort in the direction of improving his condition lies in the adoption of such means as are ready to hand, and can be utilized to his immediate advantage. It is due to the British workman's realization of his power and opportunities which the system of government provides, that he has made up his mind to do his whole part in the present conflict in order that the good work which was begun in the direction of reform, may continue and be still more fruitful.

Power to Expropriate.
 While it is quite easy to rail at the profiteers and others who have derived great pecuniary benefits from the war, the fact nevertheless remains that the government can, if it sees fit, and is influenced thereby by them asses of the people, expropriate the largest part of these profits for the benefit of the State. And while discussing this phase of the question, we must not overlook the fact that thousands of workmen have also profited by the war. True, they may be employed in the making of munitions, but that does not alter the situation as to the increased earnings which they receive. From a munition worker's standpoint, he has everything to gain if hostilities are to continue. His own welfare affects him first, and while he might deplore the war and sympathize with those who have given up their all for their country, he knows that the quicker the war is ended, the sooner will the source of his benefits be closed.

Labor's Interest in Victory.
 No democratic Government can favor in the interests of its people the continuing of war which by its very nature is destructive. The normal life of all nations (I except the Germans) is to pursue the arts of peace, since by so doing is the welfare of the whole people best promoted.

Labor, therefore, as an important and component part of the nation, is vitally interested in having the war brought to a close as quickly as possible in order that the Government may function normally. When any one or more so-called Labor leaders take it upon themselves to oppose any measure designed to hasten the end of the war, they become the enemies of the very class whose cause they profess to serve.

Pte. Stevenson's Letter.
 The item published in the press of this and other cities that Pte. Edward John Stevenson, at present in khaki, has decided to seek the support of his fellow-citizens, on the best of adequate reinforcement of the men overseas is a clear, emphatic and patriotic repudiation of the vicious principles enunciated by the President of the Trades and Labor Congress, and others who, for reasons best known to themselves, are prepared to sacrifice the men in the trenches and deny them that aid to which they are entitled because in supporting the Government's measure, they will be doing something contrary to their own views.

The language in which Pte. Stevenson's letter is couched, shows that he is a man who thinks, and deems it a necessary and patriotic duty on the part of labor, as part of the Canadian people, to take advantage of every means to reinforce the men at the front. In writing as he does, he has not said anything contrary to the interests of labor, while he has placed himself on record as opposing "the assertive spokesmen representing a small minority of Canada's wage earners" who "misrepresent the views of the great majority on the dominant problems of our share in the war."

True Leaders of Labor.
 Bravely spoken, and like the patriotic Britisher he is, Stevenson is only one of thousands of noble Canadian belonging to the ranks of Labor, who know that labor's best interest can only be advanced by the defeat of the Central Empires. President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, understands and appreciates from the workers' standpoint. His views are concurred in by sincere Labor men throughout the whole American continent. One of Labor's strongest champions and an opponent of war is at present actively lending his influence and eloquence in advising his fellow-countrymen to assist the Government in the great task it is undertaking: I refer to the well-known American lawyer, Clarence Darrow. In Canada, Mr. P. M. Draper, the Secretary of the Trades and Labor Congress, can speak with considerably more authority and sincerity on behalf of Labor than the present Socialistic head of that body, who, through disappointed ambition, is trying to satisfy his desire for vengeance at the expense of the Government and the brave men who are fighting for him. He knows that there are thousands of physically able young men (not fit to back the boots of the honest and hard-working men who have gone to the front), and who have so far failed to be influenced by appeals to their manhood and patriotism, and must be forced to don the King's uniform.

The future of labor in Canada is bright with promise. Such promise can only be fulfilled if the war is won, and we are allowed to go our way, unafraid of tyrants and Teutons. Hence, the duty of Labor, organized or unorganized, is to do as much as in its power lies, together with the other classes, to help win the war as speedily as possible.

A Big Plumber's Bill.
 The party of tourists were watching Professor X as he examined the wrapped body of an ancient Egyptian.
 "Judging from the utensils about him," remarked the professor, this mummy must have been an Egyptian plumber.
 "Wouldn't it be interesting," said a romantic young lady, "if we could bring him to life?"
 "Interesting, but a bit risky," remarked Professor X. "Somebody might have to pay him for his time."
