

For The Quiet Hour

VOYAGERS

O Maker of the Mighty Deep
Whereon our vessels fare,
Above our life's adventure keep
Thy faithful watch and care.
In Thee we trust, what'er befall;
Thy sea is great, our boats are small.

We know not where the secret tides
Will help us or delay,
Nor where the lurking tempest hides
Nor where the fogs are gray.
We trust in Thee, what'er befall;
Thy sea is great, our boats are small.

When outward bound we boldly sail
And leave the friendly shore,
Let not our heart of courage fail
Until the voyage o'er.
We trust in Thee, what'er befall;
Thy sea is great, our boats are small.

When homeward bound we gladly turn,
O bring us safely there,
Where harbor-lights of friendship burn
And peace is in the air.
We trust in Thee, what'er befall;
Thy sea is great, our boats are small.

Beyond the circle of the sea,
When voyaging is past,
We seek our final port in Thee;
O bring us home at last.
In Thee we trust, what'er befall;
Thy sea is great, our boats are small.

—Henry Van Dyke.

BLIND

The atheist sees nothing in the starry heavens and the majestic sweep of the universe except despair; no law except chance; no personality except the poor finite of one man. In other words, he is blind and unreasoning. The trouble is not without, but within him.

A KOREAN BOY SOUL-WINNER

Foster K. Gamble writes in "The Korea Mission Field": "On a recent country trip, in a village far out in the mountains, I met a boy eleven years old and was told an interesting story of his work. Less than two years ago a group of believers was gathered at Twice-oooroo through the work of the preaching band. Severe persecution resulted in increasing the faithfulness of those who had undertaken to follow Christ, and there are now about seven in regular attendance. A church building has been erected and a school opened. Among those who attended the school and church is one boy who lives in another village two miles away. For months he was the only one in the village who made any profession of Christianity, and many made light of him. He never wavered, but was regular at school and church, and constantly told his parents and others that they, too, should become Christians. Through the boy's entreaties they have now done so, and all are happy in their new faith. Who knows but that there is a career of great usefulness in the Church before this bright, earnest boy?"

REGARDING THE BIBLE

A lady doctor of the Presbyterian Board in Persia was in the forest one day reading and talking to a group of women. She noticed a man standing near, listening eagerly. When the women went away he came in, and asked abruptly: "Is that the book the English soldiers read? I want to know about the book that teaches the English how to treat their prisoners of war." Later on he was baptized.

STORIES ABOUT THAT NOBLE AND EARNEST MAN, THE late Dr. Alexander Whyte of Edinburgh, continue to appear, and one of the latest is of particular interest: A commercial traveller named Rigby was compelled to spend a week-end in the "Waverley" quarter in Edinburgh. He always stayed at the "Waverley," and worshipped at Free St. George's, being attracted by the wonderful ministry of Dr. Alexander Whyte. It was his invariable custom to try to persuade some other visitor to accompany him to the service. On one occasion, after breakfast, he saw a fellow-traveller writing busily, and approached him to ask if he were going to any place of worship. The man answered that he was too busy, but finally he consented to accompany Mr. Rigby, and was so impressed that he asked permission to go with him again at night. At the evening service his heart was strangely moved, and he yielded to Christ. The next morning Mr. Rigby was passing the house of Dr. Whyte, when an impulse prompted him to call and tell the preacher of the help he had given to one soul. As the doctor listened tears rolled down his cheeks, and then he told how he had come away from the previous evening's service feeling that everything had been a failure. Then he bethought himself to ask the name of his caller, and on being told that it was Rigby, he exclaimed: "Why you are the man I've been looking for for years!" Dr. Whyte went to his study and returned carrying a bundle of letters, from which he read such extracts as these: "I was spending a week-end in Edinburgh some weeks ago, and a fellow-commercial named Rigby invited me to accompany him to St. George's. The message of the other day I came to hear my life." I am a young man and a man called Rigby, and in that service I decided to dedicate my life to Christ." Dr. Whyte went on to say that twelve of the letters were from young men, of whom four had since entered the ministry.

DR. GRIFFITH-JONES, PRINCIPAL OF THE CONGREGATIONAL College, Bradford, England, used some very happy illustrations in a recent sermon. Speaking on the parable of the wedding feast, he suggested that the art of answering invitations is as delicate as that of sending them forth, and he said that the parable represents the normal relationship between man and God, that of fellowship. His Divine invitation is: "Come to the wedding," and "R.S.V.P. is always given on the invitations He sends by every mail." This is a point that is worthy of attention, the need of a response to God's appeal. Then Dr. Griffith-Jones spoke of those who are dead to all these Divine voices, and he added this illustration: "I live near the street cars and, standing in my garden one day I noticed a blackbird on the top of one of the trees. I could see his beak moving, but could hear no strain of song for the noise of the street cars nearby. Then there was a lull in the din, and I heard the bird's voice. Is not this a parable? If we are to hear the call of God the many loud voices of earth will have to be stilled."

SOME LITTLE TIME AGO A GOSPEL WAGON WAS AT THE corner of a street in a city in California. The preacher had a large crowd of men in his audience, many from various parts of the world. It had been arranged that on the particular evening a picture would be taken of the wagon and the workers, and a picture would be taken of the wagon and the workers, and a picture would be taken of the wagon and the workers. At standing where you are, and we will take your picture." At once some half-a-dozen men ducked their heads, pushed through the crowd and disappeared in the darkness. Why was this? They were criminals and had come to California to escape detection, and would not face the camera, or come within the radiation of the light, lest they should thereby be brought into the hands of the law. As Shakespeare said: "Conscience doth make cowards of us all." And a Greater than Shakespeare spoke of those who will not come to the light "because their deeds are evil."

A MOVEMENT IS ON FOOT TO BUILD A SCOTTISH church and hospice in Jerusalem in memory of the Scotsmen who fell in the Palestine campaign. Among the many churches in Jerusalem Presbyterianism alone is unrepresented. Christianity is needed for post-graduate divinity students. Christianity is an Oriental religion, and can best be studied on the ground. Twenty thousand dollars are needed to purchase a site; $3,000 are in hand for building the chapel.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

From The Chronicle File of February 14, 1904.

We regret to learn that Principal Allan is suffering from inflammation of the eyes.

To-day, Wednesday, our townsman Mr. Will McFadden, is being married to Miss Maggie Allan, daughter of Mr. James Allan of Egremont.

If we had known of John Robson's marriage on Wednesday when he called at our office we would have offered our congratulations.

Tom Livingston says we don't know anything about snow here. He said he was just down to Wingham, where he believes the snow is fully ten feet high on the streets.

On Friday evening Messrs. Farr, Broomall, Gagnon, Hunter, McDonald, Watling, Shires, Brown, Reilly, Randall and McCartney assembled at the Knapp House and presented Miss Mary Gaiser with a valuable dressing case as a token of esteem. The event occurred on the eve of her departure for her home at Neustadt.

A hundred and fifty million-dollar fire occurred in Baltimore, leaving over 140 acres a blackened ruin. The fire began about 11 o'clock Sunday and was unchecked until late Monday afternoon. The residential portion escaped and none are left homeless.

The stock and implements of Samuel Neal, Orchard, will be sold by auction on Monday next.

The sale of books, etc., at the Public Library on Friday night was quite a success. Nearly all the duplicates were sold at a good price, and Mr. Ramage of The Review was the lucky bidder for the piano.

War has actually begun between the Japs and the Russians, and according to yesterday's papers, Japan has sent her ships to sea with orders to attack the Russian flag wherever found.

Owing to the blocked condition of the railroads, some of our local contemporaries were unable to get their supplies of readyprint. The Markdale Standard came to us in pink as a 4-page all-home print. It is probable that in the absence of white newsprint all colors were used. Mr. Rutledge recommends that the issue be kept as a curiosity.

On Friday last Mr. Charles Harvey, a resident of Durham for the past 25 years, passed that bourne from which no traveller returns. He was born in the County of York, near Weston, 74 years ago. About 50 years ago he married Elizabeth Tyndale, who, with three sons and four daughters remain to mourn their loss. The sons are Nat. John and William, in Durham. The daughters are, Matilda, present address unknown, Mrs. J. Gilmour, and Alice, in Toronto, and Mary at home here. Interment was made Sunday in Durham cemetery.

We regret to learn of an accident that befell Miss Maggie Speers of Mono Mills, who has been visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Robert Hill. On Wednesday she slipped in the doorway, dislocated her wrist, and will be laid up for a time. Dr. MacDonald is in attendance.

A company is being formed under the name of the Walkerton and Lucknow Railway Company, to build a line from Walkerton to Lucknow by way of Teeswater.

A quiet wedding took place Wednesday, February 3, in the parlor of the parsonage in Durham, when the Rev. Wray R. Smith cemented the bond between Mr. John H. Robson and Miss Susannah Greenwood. Traverston correspondence.

BACK TO THE TRADES

(Arthur Enterprise-News.)

The editor of a small-town exchange last week tells of walking down the street one evening from the post office to the corner and counting more than a score of young men standing around. Of the lot, not one was learning a trade or preparing himself for any useful work in life. One, the editor states, had hopes of getting into the bank.

A fairly steady job in unskilled labor of some kind is all they can ever hope to attain. What is true of that little town is true of Arthur, and of almost every other place in the province. It is a state of affairs that certainly does not tend to produce a high class of citizenship or a prosperous industrial country.

Perhaps some of the trouble is due to false standards which public opinion has set up. There has been a tendency in late years to place a rather low estimate upon the calling that requires a sound mind, and a good, strong, healthy body, although these are the finest gifts which Providence bestows upon humanity. Often a young fellow spends months trying to locate a good job, a "position" he will probably call it, which will carry with it an imagined prestige, while all the time, there was right at hand an opportunity to learn a good trade into which he could throw quite as high a mental effort as the desired "position" would permit of, and which would yield more happiness, independence and greater chances for reasonable success.

The late Queen Victoria believed that every person should know some line of work by which they could earn a livelihood and with which they could make themselves useful members of society. Every member of her family learned a trade. The daughter of the late Czar of Russia is to-day earning her living in London teaching music. When she studied music in her happy girlhood, there was nothing further from her mind than the thought that one day she would be forced to fall back upon the knowledge she was acquiring to secure her daily bread. In England to-day in many factories of different kinds will be found the sons of noble families, working as apprentices at various trades. This is a fine thing for the apprentice and for British industrial life. Nothing should command more respect than fine skill as a tradesman. Nothing to-day offers more opportunity for success, and still a host of young fellows are letting slip the opportunity to learn the trade in which they could excel and are facing a future with nothing more in it than hard work at poor pay or an office job in which they will never rise above the daily routine grind.

OUR HOME TOWN

The Home Town means a lot more to some people than to others. Some folks never feel close ties to any place. They move around without feeling of regret or loss. They do not feel badly to part with the friends they make, because they do not create intimate ties. They do not acknowledge obligation to work in co-operation with their fellow-citizens and no one feels any obligation to help them along. They play a lone hand all their days and never get far. Other people have an intense feeling of loyalty binding them to the home soil. It is partly sentimental affection, partly a keen sense of the advantages of business unity and co-operation.

They feel united by a common tie to all the people who live in the town. Southampton has many people of this kind and we have room for lots more of them. They feel a keen interest in every person or thing that was ever connected with the place and any project tending to work for its benefit has their hearty and enthusiastic support.

In so far as all of our people ascribe that point of view, we shall attain our ideals as a community. This involves giving a preference in all our business relations to anything that comes from the home town. If a suit of clothes sold here is just as good as one bought somewhere else we should buy the suit of clothes sold here. We might well buy it even if it is not quite so good, but it is not necessary in our good stores to make this kind of sacrifice. When a town fully acquires this unity of spirit and purpose and feeling, it is in a fair way to make the most of its possibilities.

FORMER GREY CO. MAN IS PRINCIPAL IN DETROIT DIVORCE SUIT

Well-known Detroit Doctor, Formerly a Resident of Flesherton, Could Not Stand His Wife's "Pink Teas" and She Sues For Divorce.

According to a dispatch from Detroit, Dr. Robert J. Baskerville, formerly well-known in Flesherton, has been the central figure in a divorce suit instituted by his wife, in which he states in his own defence that his inability to swallow his wife's "pink teas" and some of her other fads, was the big lever used in instituting the action for separation. The dispatch, under date of February 2, says:

"My wife desired that I resort here to continual rounds of 'pink teas,' society functions and entertainments while I preferred a life of the outdoors and communion with nature." Dr. Robert J. Baskerville, 50, well-known army surgeon, declared, commenting on the divorce obtained by his beautiful wife, Mrs. Gertrude Richardson Baskerville, 35.

Mrs. Baskerville is one of the foremost pianists in the United States, and an instructor at the Detroit Conservatory of Music.

The suit was not contested by Dr. Baskerville. Judge Adolph F. Marschner granted the decree after Mrs. Baskerville had testified that her husband had rented their home at 216 East Grand boulevard to strangers while she was on a vacation, and told her there was no place for her.

Dr. Baskerville expressed great surprise when informed by a reporter of the charges made by Mrs. Baskerville on the witness stand.

"Mrs. Baskerville has no foundation for her allegations of mistreatment," he said. "Our married life was a clear case of incompatibility. She wanted me to accompany her to all sorts of formal society affairs which irked and bored me to distraction. I enjoy myself most when in the woods. I own a hunting camp in the Canadian woods where I spend a large part of my time every year."

"Chase Osborn, a great friend of mine, often visited me there. My position was exactly parallel to his. Chase and I, when seated at night around the fireplace in my hunting lodge, have often discussed the differences in taste of our wives, who are only happy when in the midst of social activities."

Well-known in Detroit.

Mrs. Baskerville is well-known in Detroit, both as a soloist and as an instructor on the piano. Before her marriage Mrs. Baskerville studied in this country with several prominent pianists and then spent seven years in Paris studying with Wagner Swayne, and was his first assistant for four years. She was recognized as one of the foremost artists living abroad and has appeared often in Europe and America in recital and as soloist with orchestras including the Detroit orchestra and Philadelphia Symphony. She appeared as soloist at the celebration of the 50th
