WHAT IS A GENTLEMAN?

A lady was asked this question the other day and found difficulty in saying off hand what characteristics and qualities she considered essential in the make-up of a gentleman.

The Standard Dictionary says: "A well-bred and honorable man; a man of education, high principles, courtesy and kindness; a man of honor."

In some ways this is better even than that of the dictionary. If you are not satisfied with either or both sit down with a pencil and a piece of paper and make a better one for yourself.

No mother can do her boy a much better service than to instill into his developing mind true ideals of life and living, so that he may make the most and best out of his life and get the most and best out of it.

It doesn't matter so much what he does, or where he is, as what he is. "Gentleman" Brown, as he is called by his admirer country folk worked in a coal mine for 30 years yet he is a gentleman, who can be entrusted to worthy represent royalty at an important Church and State function.

THE DISAPPEARING FORESTS Twenty-five years ago citizens of this part of Ontario would scoff at the suggestion of bringing building material from British Columbia to build barn-frames in this well wooded portion of Canada.

Mr. Charles Kopas is replacing the barn recently destroyed by fire on his farm in West Lutherville with a fine new structure. On Wednesday last the lumber arrived at the local C.P.R. station and some ten or twelve of his neighbors turned out with their teams to assist in hauling it home.

THE SOUTHAMPTON BEACON SAYS THAT a walk down to the foot of High St. in that town will bring surprise to any citizen of Southampton when it is seen how great a distance the water line has receded since last summer even.

HAD TO HAVE PAPER After a year's trial without a newspaper the Board of Trade in Thorold, with a population of 5,000 has guaranteed Messrs. Thompson & Son enough trade to warrant them in re-issuing The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

From The Chronicle File of June 16, 1904.

Mr. John Barbour left last Wednesday to spend a few weeks on Manitowish Island.

Mrs. Guy Williams will leave the latter part of this week to join her husband at Tisdale, Sask.

In the tree-embowered old stone house of Mr. John Fallaise, Sr., on Thursday of last week, a most happy union took place.

Mr. Charles Moffat leaves this week for Port Arthur to visit his son Harry, who is farming near there—Edge Hill cor.

Mr. J. H. Burrows left Tuesday for Calgary, where he has secured a good position as druggist.

Mrs. Jake Kress and family are now living in their new cottage on College street. Mr. Kress is at the sanitarium at Muskoka, but we hope to see him return soon with a full measure of health.

Mr. George Turnbull of Bentinck left Monday morning for Scotland, and will be absent for a couple of months.

Mr. William Moffat is down with typhoid fever.

Born.—In Bentinck, on Tuesday, June 2, to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Mighon, a son.

Died.—In Ingersoll, on Friday, June 10, 1904, Lydia Swallow, aged 25 years.

Sid Willis, Charles McGillivray, Arthur Aljee, Alex. McComb, Oscar Turner, George Burnett, Robert Vollett, Thomas Reid, Tom Moore (Thistle), Wes Arnett, Alf Noble and Thomas McComb, with Staff Sergeant William Rammer, and Captain O. M. Snider left for Niagara Monday morning and for ten or twelve days will be under drill.

We referred recently to the purchase of the Durham brick yard by Mr. William Black, and we have pleasure this week in telling our readers that negotiations have been completed between Mr. Black and Mr. Walker of London, a practical brick maker, who is highly recommended, and in a few weeks a kiln will be ready for sale.

Why Is It?

There are four poisons which are strong factors in indigestion, namely, tobacco, tea, coffee and alcohol.

Dr. and Mrs. T. R. Heath and baby Muriel, of Toronto, are visiting the former's sister, Mrs. J. C. Henderson.

Miss Jean Hepburn returned last Thursday from an extended visit with relatives at North Bay.

Mr. and Mrs. N. T. Harding, and Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Pearce and baby Othello, all of Stratford, were guests at Mr. E. W. Linnin's over Sunday.

Mrs. Murray Hoy of Stratford, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McGillivray.

Miss Nellie McKechnie of the C.N.R. offices in Montreal, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. McKechnie.

Mr. Donald Graham is spending a week with friends and relatives at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Forsyth and children of Perth are visiting Mrs. Forsyth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S.F. McComb.

Mr. Thomas Moore, who visited his brother, Robert, at Owen Sound, and sister, Mrs. T. McComb, near Williamsford, as well as relatives in town for a week, left for Woodstock on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Ramage visited the latter's brother, Mr. Coleridge, at Owen Sound, last week-end.

Mr. W. J. Jolly of Weyburn, Sask., left yesterday for home after spending a few days with his sister, Mrs. (Rev.) Smith.

FRUIT TREATMENT HEALS KIDNEYS

Concentrated Fruit Juices Give Astonishing Results

Anyone who has suffered with Weak or Irritated Kidneys—with the accompanying miseries of pain in the back, splitting headaches, swollen hands and feet, rheumatism and constipation—ought to try the Fruit Treatment for their trouble.

To those who use intensified fruit juices—"Fruit-a-tives"—for the first time, it seems almost impossible that the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes combined with tonics, could relieve kidney trouble.

But a short treatment of "Fruit-a-tives" gives quick relief and the regular use of these intensified fruit juices or "Fruit Liver Tablets" prove their marvelous virtues.

Get "Fruit-a-tives" today and begin the Fruit Treatment. At all dealers; 25c. and 50c. a box; or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

Did She Mean All This? While the wedding ceremony was going on, a baby of one of the wedding guests cried incessantly.

"Wasn't that crying terrible?" exclaimed the maid of honor. "When I get married I'm going to have engaged on my invitations, 'No babies expected!'"

Hon. Duncan Marshall (Continued from page 1) strange thing that whiskey should ever be scarce in Scotland, and Sinclair lamented the days not so very long before when good whiskey was a penny ha-penny a glass, and no limit to the quantity. However, the speaker expressed the opinion that in all probability the prohibitive price was the only prohibition Scotland would see for some time. Eoinboro, the Scotchman will tell you, is the most beautiful city, not only in Scotland, but in the whole world. Princess street, its chief thoroughfare, is lined on one side by fine shops, on the other a great natural park, with a forest of trees, and back of it all, old Eoinboro Castle surmounts the gentle hill that rises behind. Not only the place of beauty, but the home of education, Eoinboro has given to the world many a noted man in academic life, men who like Carlyle, walked many a weary mile to reach that seat of learning. From Eoinboro the speaker passed on to Glasgow, the Manchester of Scotland, where more than half the manufacturing population of Scotland are to be found. Then down into the Burns country, to Ayr, the rock, where the first edition of Burns' poems were published and then to Ayr to visit such places of interest to every visitor, as Tam o' Shanter's Tap Room, and the Burns monument in the market square. From here on the speaker took to points of interest in connection with the story of Burns' life and works, as the house which Burns chose to Ayr; the Burns cottage, and the Burns museum, and further on "Always haunted kirk" where Tam o' Shanter's curiosity overcame his cowardice and he saw the witches dance at midnight hour to the piping of Old Nick himself. In every case the speaker showed his knowledge of his Burns by quoting appropriately. Then back from Thornhill to Dumfries, with a delightful drive along the banks of the Nith past Maxwellton and Castle Douglas, the stronghold of the Black Douglas, famed in song and story, and now in ruins. Then on to Stirling on the road to London, the best-known road, he said, to Scotland, starting the battle-field, not only of English and Scotch at Bannockburn, but also the scene of numerous conflicts between Highlander and Lowlander. As the Scotchman gazes on Stirling, he thought that the first king of a united England and Scotland came from Stirling. Then past Loch Lomond and all the beautiful lake country. It takes the speaker said, some time to realize wherein the beauty of this country lies. To one used to the grandeur of the Rockies, or the extent of our American National Parks, it seems at first petty and insignificant, but then gradually there comes to one the realization that here you can see mountain, lake, eagle, and forest, all in one glance, small but absolutely perfect. From here he took us more towards the Highlands, the country made famous in the tales of Sir Walter Scott, the scene of the memorable conflict between Fitz-James and the Redoubtful Duke, past Glen Alzean, till at last we reached the Highlands at Perth and Seacroft and on across the Grampians to the Glen Alzean. The every hillside Highland cattle and black-faced sheep grazed contentedly. Thence on to Inverness, the beautiful town in full bloom and the heather was in thick cover and a marvelous sight. On past the castle where Prince Charlie made his last stand, past Culloden, and over the Skye and across the Sound to Skye, one of the most delightful water trips a man can make. Then to Dundee and Aberdeen, the shire, the agricultural country of Scotland. When one notes, as the speaker said, throughout the whole of the Old Land the use that is made of every inch of arable land, little pockets of ground in the midst of the rock, and then remembers they contain a population of 46 millions, they can't help but be struck by the fact that a Britisher, and also gives some understanding of how it was possible for the pioneers of such stock to live out a living in this new land. It is the boast of the Highlands that in the late war some regiments were five times recruited from one Glen alone, and even in the reconstruction, despite much seeming unrest, all are doing their best to carry a share of the burden. Mr. Marshall spoke of a trip to the Prince of Wales' stock farm in Cornwall and the marvelous country through which they travelled, with little trees or four- or five-cornered fields pieced together like a crazy quilt. Then back to Mullagh just as dusk was falling, to view "Fair Melrose in the pale moonlight"; then on to Abbotsford, the home of Scott, with all its wondrous memories. And last of all, to Aberdeen, the home and centre of the live-stock raising industry. Here, perhaps, the true men stock revealed to us. All other things one would almost see were incidentals, the pleasures of a summer holiday, but Mr. Marshall's heart and soul were wrapped up in stock raising. He didn't know one man who thought he didn't know enough to raise stock and, at middle life entered university and studied and returned, to become one of the most successful stockmen of his day and
