

Visiting Sailors Tou. Canadian Rockies

Above, some of the sailors are here seen at Banff grouped around the huge Canadian Pacific self-heating locomotive which headed them through the Rockies. Inset—Perry-Relaxing at Revelstoke.

Through the courtesy of the Dominion Government twenty-five officers and two hundred and twenty men of the British Service Squadron on tour were given a trip from Vancouver through the Rocky Mountains as far as Calgary by special Canadian Pacific train, returning by way of Edmonton. The men were selected from the Flag Ship H.M.S. Hood, H.M.S. Repulse and H.M.S. Adelaide. All through the mountains the train was given most enthusiastic receptions from people lining the stations wherever it stopped and shouting their greetings from the smaller ones as it passed. During a stop of two hours at Revelstoke the entire crowd was taken to the top of Mount Revelstoke in automobiles. As Field it seemed impossible to get the train away, so anxious were the people to heap flowers and congratulations on the men. Banff citizens met them with automobiles and showed them around at night on arrival and again in the morning when they visited the bathing pools. The reception at Calgary was equal to that accorded the visiting sailors all along the line, and all day they were entertained at receptions and banquets, closing the day with a ball at the Palliser Hotel for the officers and a smoker at the armoury for the men. Throughout the trip the sailors were as busy photographing as being photographed. All of them have travelled far and viewed the scenery of many lands, but they are unanimous in the opinion that the beauty of the Rockies—Banff National Park, Albert Canyon and so on, is superior and more grand by far than anything else they have seen.

ON NIAGARA'S BRINK

Only two men, so far as we know, have ever passed a night virtually on the brink of the Horseshoe Fall of Niagara. Those men, says a writer in the World Wide Magazine, are Gustave F. Lofberg and James H. Harris, who were employed as dredgers. On an afternoon in August, 1923, their scow broke its cable, and they were at the mercy of the swift current above the falls. There seemed to be no hope for them. Down they swept, and then suddenly the heavy scow ran aground almost on the brink!

The minds of the watchers on shore, says the writer, worked like lightning. They quickly decided on a line and a breeches buoy as a method of rescue. The Coast Guard Station at the mouth of the Niagara River, fifteen miles or so distant, was immediately called on the telephone, and Capt. A. E. Nelson and his crew were asked to come to the rescue.

It was about three o'clock when the scow broke adrift at a quarter past four Capt. Nelson and a squad of men started for Niagara Falls in a big army motor truck. They carried with them the life-line cannon and other necessary apparatus. The question that agitated every mind was whether the fierce current would lick the scow away before the men could be saved? It was a race between the river and the rescuers.

When Capt. Nelson and his men arrived they quickly set up the life-line cannon on the shore east of the power house. The captain sighted it and fired. High out over the river the projectile hurtled. It made a remarkable flight and then settled directly over the scow.

Lofberg and Harris grabbed the small line as it fell and at a signal began drawing it in. Attached to the shore end was a heavier rope, but the two men had a hard time hauling it across the swift current. Though those on shore helped all they could, it took two hours to get the rope over. Then those on shore carried the end up on top of the power house and made it secure.

As the work progressed night came on, and big searchlights were brought into play. For a time the rescuers kept at their task, but after a while they reluctantly agreed that their efforts must cease until daylight.

Out on the scow Lofberg and Harris were seen to lie down to rest. If rest were possible for men aboard a stranded scow that at any minute might be picked up on a rising flood and tumbled over the brink of Niagara. It was a night of awful suspense, not only for the poor fellows on the scow and the men engaged in their rescue but for the thousands of men, women and children who had lingered on the scene.

Daylight on the morning of August 7 saw everyone alert. The scow still lay where it had run aground, though it might move at any moment. Quickly all the lines were cleared, and after a little delay the breeches buoy was sent out to the castaways. Lofberg helped his companion into the buoy, and before long he landed safe on the roof of the power house. Again the buoy was sent out over the rapids; when it reached the scow Lofberg climbed into it. Only a few minutes were required to land him on the roof, and then a great cheer went up from the watching crowds.

ONE HUNDRED AND COSTS IS FINE FOR E. O. T. A.

William Gadesky's Home Raided on Friday Evening By the Officers.

William Gadesky of Owen Sound, pleaded guilty in police court on Saturday morning to having illegally purchased liquor and was fined $100 and costs by Magistrate Creaser. License Inspector Beckett and Provincial Constable Jones paid a visit to the Gadesky home on Friday evening in a search for liquor and it looked for a time as though their visit would be fruitless. Finally, however, it was noticed that there was a peculiar little panel in the floor of the dining room, and when this was raised no less than a dozen bottles of gin were found concealed therein. A further search revealed another panel, and this yielded 15 bottles of the same quality of booze. The officers confiscated the stimulants and then followed the laying of the charge. Gadesky admitted having purchased the gin, but did not know the name of the man from whom it was purchased, stating that a stranger approached him and after finding out that his name was Gadesky, offered to sell him the liquor. It was an expensive buy.

GLENN HUNTER DISCUSSES ART

Famous Paramount Star, Here Tomorrow and Saturday Nights in "West of the Water Tower," Talks of Stage Work.

Glenn Hunter, who has had his own experience and bumps in handling a place in stardom and whose hard knocks have given an added authority to what he says and does as the hero of "West of the Water Tower," a Paramount picture due at the Veterans' Star theatre Friday and Saturday of this week, says that photoplay acting is more difficult than stage work, as it requires a more exacting technique.

"On the screen you are entirely dependent upon facial expression and body gesticulation to get your message across," Mr. Hunter says. "It is not enough to be natural, as so many persons seem to think. As a matter of fact, the appearance of naturalness on the screen can never be acquired by actual naturalness on the part of the performer.

"Acting, like music, poetry, painting and sculpture, demands expression, selection, and a certain amount of exaggeration. If a player appears natural on the screen, you may safely assume that he has worked hard to acquire this desired impression."

Some of the United States sprinters are beginning to wonder why anybody ever called the British slow-Peterboro' Examiner.

STOLE COATS AT DANCE

During a dance on the night of the races at Walkerton, two raincoats disappeared and as a result two 19-year-old Hanover youths, Roy Hill-zartner and Gordon Boeltger, were summoned to appear before Magistrate McNab at Walkerton on a charge of theft and were found guilty. Owing to their previous good records and their youthfulness the magistrate allowed them off on suspended sentence on bonds of $100 each being furnished for their good behavior for six months. During this time they must attend church at least once a Sunday and be at home nights before ten o'clock.
