France's New Premier--Back in 1909

PRESS DISPATCHES, photographs and movies from France continue to extol the popularity and esteem with which the new premier, M. Herriot, is held by the French proletariat. Wherever he appears he is cordially received and greeted and his appearance as premier under President Donmergue was favorably accepted in all political circles. The rare photo above, however, is one that but few people have ever seen of him. It was taken fifteen years ago—in 1909, to be exact—at the time Premier Herriot was a member of the French Military Reserves. He was known then as Edouard Pitou, the latter name being Argot—something akin to the British "Tommy."

"Home Made" Shower

REPUBLICANS throughout the United States are going to be a happy lot if they succeed in covering themselves with the spoils of victory after the November elections—as easily as this symbol of theirs is giving himself a "home made" shower bath. Warm weather never bothered this Jumbo in the New York zoo. A trunk full of water and presto!—he enjoyed a cool shower at any hour of the day and he felt like having one. And the photo shows him perfectly content while taking his "over-head bath." Note the crossed hind legs.

Razors 6,000 Years Old

COMIC ARTISTS have always pictured men of the stone age and shortly thereafter, with big mops of hair and long, flowing beards—thereby creating the impression that those old timers never shaved and had no idea of what a razor was for. That natural supposition has now been discredited. Those tiny objects shown resting in the hand above are razor blades said to be more than 6,000 years old. They were found by a joint expedition of the University Museum, Philadelphia—at Ur of the Chaldees, Babylonia. The blades were chipped from Obsidian and were located in the graves of the Sumerians.

Italy's Ruler on Visit to London

PUBLIC DEMONSTRATIONS of an exceedingly friendly nature greeted the King and Queen of Italy on the occasion of their recent formal visit to England. They were the guests of British Royalty and their visit was marked by much pomp and ceremony—such as the British populace had not been treated to in many a day. One of the many interesting places to which the Italian king and queen were escorted was Westminster Abbey, where the above picture was taken. It shows King Emmanuel leaving the Abbey accompanied by Canon Carnegie. Note the difference in stature between the tall, venerable-looking English clergyman and his royal guest.

Ox-Back Riding in India

OXEN still play an important part in the life and customs of natives in the ancient city of Gwalior, India. Not only for plowing and hauling purposes, but equestrian activities, too. The photograph here shows an Indian with his son astride a docile ox. Of course, it's not what you would call "rapid transit," but then—the people over there have all kinds of time and they get there just the same. One there consolation, at least, in this method of transportation. It may be slow, but you're safe from reckless drivers in crossing the streets. Then, too, there's no "high cost of gasoline."

To Get "Dope" on Autos

A Singing Dog

ALL the dogs of our acquaintance have no particular liking for music. But—here's one that actually provides the "sharps" and "flats" all the way up and down the scale. He is known as a "singing dog," and was recently presented to the Washington, D.C., zoo by William L. Schurz, commercial attache of the American Embassy at Rio de Janeiro. The dog—which Mr. Schurz caught on the Amazon river,—has a head like an ant-eater, cauliflower ears and web feet.

"White Monkey" Shines

PEOPLE WHO ATTENDED "TOYLAND" at the New York Hippodrome recently evinced much surprise and admiration for one of its many features—namely, a white monkey. This species is very rare and the one shown above—affectionately labeled "Ole Bill"—is the only one of his kind in America. He was captured in the Malayan jungles. "Ole Bill" at first was a bit excited and did not take his captivity gracefully for a long time. Now, however, he's become accustomed to it, and is allowed to roam wherever he wishes. The movie camera in this picture "took his eye" and he was amusing himself with the crank on it when our photographer caught him in the act.
