The "Bucking" Flivver

Now that the Prince of Wales is back in England with that nickel-plated flivver Henry Ford gave him, some of his horses are going to be out of a job. For, we're sure, his highness will feel just as much at home in that galloping gondola as he does on a horse's back. You know-now you see him-now you don't!

Can't you just picture what a "jolly bit o' fun" the Londonites would have watching the Prince hold up a big parade in his honor—just because his nickel-plated Henry "went dead" and he had to get out and crank it?

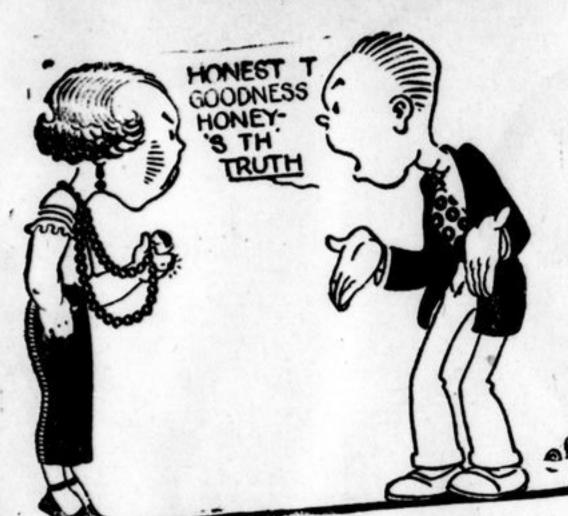

Things Worth Knowing

REFERENCE: A written pack of lies from one employer to another.

LAYING: Something the bill collector does for you.

SAFETY PIN: A married man's lodge emblem. PAINT: Substitute for soap. Ask any flapper. MAHOGANY TABLE: Resting place for burning cigars or cigarettes.

WATER: Colorless liquid that makes two quarts of milk out of one. RESTAURANT: A filling station. Also, a fly's boarding house.

We never envy the guy who lands a soft job because of having a "pull." He's usually the first one to pull out-by requestwhen administrations change.

A Kissing Game She KISSED-Him and whispered "Now go and ask father." He did. And Got Another KISS That sent him out KISSING-The sidewalk!

We smiled at the young lady and she smiled back. But there was something about her that didn't make a very favorable impression on us. Sort of odd looking. Twas her husband.
