By R. M. SHERRILL
 (Radio Engineer)

Amateur radio operators of Indiana, who are members of the American Radio Relay League, are planning their second annual "get-together" early next month.

The affair is to be a regular state A. R. R. L. convention, and is to take place at Indianapolis, Ind., on July 10th and 11th. A good time is promised for everyone, and A. R. R. L. members from all over the country are expected to attend.

Oscillating Receivers

The people in the state of Connecticut are tired of listening to those oscillating receiving sets which radiate and spoil broadcast reception.

Radio enthusiasts in that state have become interested in the bill before the legislature which prohibits any sort of interference with broadcasting between 6 p.m. and midnight.

Other states are contemplating similar methods of eliminating this annoyance.

Extreme Radio Locations

The world's most southern radio station is located in the Antarctic on one of the South Orkney Islands.

The world's highest radio station is believed to be the one which is located in the Pyrenees Mountains near the Spanish border. This station is approximately 9,500 feet above the sea level. Because of its unusual height, this station is expected to furnish some interesting information on both telegraphy and telephony.

Two-Way Reception

Now that radio signals are frequently being received on the opposite side of the earth, it looks as though this world were not quite large enough to give the waves a chance to fully "do their stuff."

When signals are being received from half way around the world, it is a question whether they are coming from the east, from the west, or from out of the top of the globe. According to directional tests, carried out in Australia, signals from America arrive from both the east

RADIO QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Mr. Sherrill will be glad to help you solve your radio problems. Write him, care of The Durham Chronicle.

M. E. R. says: "I followed your instructions in the building of the reflex receiver but am unable to tune in the stations with the higher wave lengths. What is the reason for this?"

Ans.—It is probable that your variable condensers may not have enough capacity even though they have the proper number of plates.

A. McM. says: "I am expecting to add a tube amplifier to my crystal set. Is it best to use this tube as a R. F. or an A. F. amplifier?"

Ans.—The R. F. amplifier will greatly increase the selectivity of the receiver and also the sensitivity. You will get somewhat louder signals, however, by using the tube as an A. F. amplifier.

the Council with regard to the Maple Leaf Theatre license, the matter was referred to the By-Laws, License and Police Committee for investigation. The question of paving North Main Street brought forth some discussion, but the majority were opposed to doing the work now.
