SCRAPPY REDSKIN IN BRUCE COUNTY JAIL

Andrew Akwenzie Receives Two Months For Part in Fight Which Started When Thresher Objected to Indians Smoking While Threshing.—Judge Finds Chewing Tobacco Worse Than Smoking Variety in Court Room.

Fighting on the Cape Croker Reserve seems a regular hobby with the redskins, and as a consequence of this tendency to arbitrate matters with the fist, Andrew Akwenzie, a particularly peppery brave, was brought to the Walkerton jail on Tuesday last to serve two months for his weakness in dealing out uppercuts and making, as it were, a punching bag of his brethren. It seems that Constable Jack Jones a stalwart redskin, besides policing the Reserve, runs a threshing outfit as a sideline. As a preventative against fire, he won't allow smoking around his machine, and this in face of the fact that almost every brave is a devotee of the weed. While threshing at Gregor Keesig's on September 21, he reproved Pedon-quot, one of the natives, for lighting up, and a fight ensuing between the two, the cop had the satisfaction of triumphing in the battle. Within half an hour, another Indian came up with a pipe in his mouth and prepared to start something. As he refused to put the bag out, the constable knocked the pipe from his mouth and hostilities opened with a bang. Several other Indians jumped in and soon there was a lively rumput on the reserve. One Indian, Andrew Akwenzie, who was out on suspended sentence for the part he took in a fight at a hockey match last winter, did not let this little feature prevent him from taking a prominent part in the melee. The fight would probably have been going on yet had the squaws not run out of their wigwams and pulled the combatants apart.

Three of the contestants were arraigned before Magistrate McCartney in the police court at Cape Croker on Monday, which was the signal for a general holiday on the Reserve. The Indians gathered in such force to hear the trial that the hall was crowded, and when they lit their pipes, the room was shortly like a smoke-house. The court ordered them to put out their pipes or get out, which was the signal for them quenching the weed, and at the same time taking a chew off their Navy plug.

Soon the session was interrupted with the natives shooting through their teeth at the cuspidor and with this continuous bang, the court soon realized that the last state was worse than the first. The floor resembled a miniature Johnstown flood, the gang having proved such poor marksmen.

However, the Magistrate and Crown Attorney Freeborn of Walkerton waded through the session, with the result that Akwenzie was sent to the Walkerton jail for two months. Another scrapper named Ashkewa was fined $10 and costs or $16 in all, while a third offender, David Solomon, was mulcted $5 and costs or a levy of $11 for his share.

Pulling Ontario's Feet out of the Mud

That's what Good Roads are doing

Look back ten years and you will remember that rarely did you drive beyond your own township. You could not know the people or the country forty or fifty miles away. For months each year impassable stretches of mud confronted you in almost every direction.

Today, at all seasons of the year, you may travel almost anywhere. Good roads are pulling Ontario's feet out of the mud.

To help keep the roads in repair, see that you use them sanely. The law provides restrictions in the loading of trucks, and a speed limit of 25 miles an hour for passenger cars. When you fail to observe these provisions, you do unnecessary damage either by breaking down the road foundation or tearing up its surface.

As the cost of road building and maintenance is falling more and more on the user of the roads, motorists should realize the necessity of obeying the law, and, also, the advantage of securing the co-operation of others in doing so.

To know more about the size and importance of the good roads problem, take a motor trip this fall. Note the development in farm and home improvements. Observe the well-kept lawns. You will at once realize the vital relationship that all these have to good roads.

An advertisement issued by the Ontario Department of Highways to secure the co-operation of motorists and truck drivers, Automobile Clubs, Good Roads Associations and all other public spirited bodies, in abating the abuse of the roads of the Province.
