A WARNING TO MOTORISTS!

By DR. W. J. SCHOLLES

Note: Dr. Scholes will answer such health questions in these columns as will be of interest to others and permissible in public print. Personal questions will be answered only when accompanied by self-addressed and stamped envelope. Address Dr. W. J. Scholes, in care of The Durham Chronicle.

All of the deaths caused by automobiles are not due to reckless driving or to "jay" walking. Each year a large number of people lose their lives by poisoning from automobile exhaust gas. Carbon monoxide, a product of incomplete combustion, is responsible for the poisoning, which is the same as that caused by the inhalation of illuminating gas or coal gas.

Many people who know that illuminating gas and coal gas are dangerous seem to be unaware of the dangers of inhaling automobile exhaust gas. And this in spite of the number of deaths from this cause that are reported in the newspapers each year.

The story of most of these tragedies is essentially the same. The victim has gone into the garage—usually a one- or two-car private garage—and started the motor of his car. He has neglected to open the doors of the garage. He has remained in the closed, unventilated garage for a few minutes tinkering with the car while the motor was running. In the meantime, the concentration of carbon monoxide in the air has been increasing to dangerous proportions.

Gas Not Perceptible

Now carbon monoxide gas cannot be seen. It has no odor or taste. One does not know that he is getting a poisonous dose until symptoms of poisoning develop. And these symptoms are perhaps not long in developing. They are headache, dizziness, difficult breathing, a feeling of sickness at the stomach.

Yet they are all symptoms that may be caused by other things. But when they occur under conditions in which poisoning is likely, no time should be lost in getting into the open air. If one heeds the symptoms and gets out of doors while he is still able to, he may soon recover. If he ignores the warning symptoms, he may soon become unconscious. It seems likely, that in many instances, unconsciousness must have occurred so rapidly that the victim did not have time to escape.

If one is overcome by automobile exhaust gas while in a public garage, he may be fortunate enough to receive help before he is too severely poisoned to recover. But the plight of the person who is overcome in a private garage is rarely discovered until it is too late.

First aid to victims of gas poisoning consists in immediate removal to the fresh air and in giving artificial respiration, such as is given to persons who have drowned. The patient should be covered with a blanket in order to avoid chilling. A physician should be called, as additional treatment for the after-effects of the poisoning is often necessary.

The way to avoid poisoning from automobile exhaust gas is to insure a plentiful supply of fresh air by opening the doors of the garage before starting the motor.

This is one kind of death that can be avoided with a little care.

HEALTH QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Infection—and Probably Diabetes
 Mont. writes: "An elderly person had boils. If the discharge from the boils touched healthy skin, a new boil started. Eight years later the same person had sores on the legs and hands, and also complained of a sore feeling at the angles of the mouth. Was troubled with bad breath and coughed frequently. What do these symptoms indicate?"

Reply

A positive diagnosis could not be made without a careful examination. Boils are due to infection of the skin. People who have infected tonsils, bronchi and nasal sinuses, are sometimes very susceptible to boils. Boils and other infections readily occur in those who have diabetes. The bad breath may have resulted from a diseased mouth or throat, chronic catarrh, bronchitis, or indigestion and constipation. The cough may have resulted from irritation of the throat, bronchitis or congestion due to a weakened heart.

Running Ear

Mrs. L. F. B. writes: "Last winter my son had a very bad sore throat. When he was getting over the sore throat, he had trouble with both of his ears. One of the ears gathered and broke. It ran for quite a while, then got all right, and he was not troubled with it all summer. Lately it has begun to run again, and he has had a couple of spells of ear-ache, though not very bad. What can we do for it?"

Reply

Trouble with the ears may be serious and should not be neglected. If you have not already done so, take your son to your doctor. If he will either treat the ear himself, or refer the boy to some specialist.

LINDSAY DAVID WHITE

A death particularly sad was that of Lindsay David White, who passed away at his home in Arthur on Wednesday, November 25, 1925, after an illness extending over the past year. Early this year he spent some time in the Sanitarium at Weston, but failed to respond to the treatment and gradually sank until the end came.

The deceased was the only son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William White and was born in Glenelg Township nearly 26 years ago. In 1920 he was married to Miss Blanche Rowe of Strongfield, Sask., and for a few months, conducted a garage at Traverston, afterwards moving to Arthur and following the same business. He is survived by his wife, who lovingly cared for him during his long and trying illness, and by two small children, who have the sincere sympathy of a wide circle of friends in their bereavement. The deceased was popular in Markdale and vicinity, and his early death is deeply regretted by all.

The funeral took place Friday afternoon to Markdale cemetery. A service was conducted at the home in Arthur and in Cooke's church here, the latter being in charge of Rev. Dr. Gray. The pall bearers were Messrs. T. H. Wilson, A. L. Walker, E. Peart, J. Peart, M. Armstrong and C. Foster—Markdale Standard.

All the Symptoms

"My dear," said a young wife in town, to her husband, "the baby has been trying to talk again."
 "What was he talking about?"
 "I think it must have been politics. He started very calmly, but in a few minutes he was as angry and red in the face as he could be."—Markham Economist.

LOSS OF GRAIN VERY SLIGHT IN THE WELL-BUILT SILO

The loss of grain in a good silo is very slight, less in fact than is ordinarily sustained in the usual manner of storing corn in shock and crib.

Analysis of the various parts of the corn plant, including entire kernels, broken kernels, roughage and juice from the same lots of corn, before and after storage in the silo, made by A. E. Perkins, of the dairy department of Ohio Experimental Station, show that there is no loss in the silo. A considerable part of the food material disappears from the grain itself, but this material is distributed uniformly throughout the silage juice.

It is loss only in case of a loss of juice. This may occur in very immature silage or when the silo is without a roof. The loss of grain in the portion of silage which decays at the surface before feeding is begun may be prevented by removing the ears from the last load or two of corn ensiled.
