Feeding Baby Chicks

Professor W. R. Graham, Professor of Poultry Husbandry, O. A. C., Guelph, gives the following recommendations for starting baby chicks.

It is well to remember that these rations and methods of feeding have been successfully used for chicks hatched in early February, or under conditions where they never get out on the ground, and where every portion of feed must be given the birds. Where the chicks are raised out in the direct sunlight, and have an abundance of tender, green feed, such as cod liver oil, tomatoes, etc., might not be essential, but one can be reasonably certain that if a ration will grow what appears to be normal chicks under indoor conditions, it should be equally successful where part time is indoors and part time out of doors.

The litter used around the brooders is cut alfalfa hay of good quality. The chicks eat some of the cut hay. It is a factor in their diet, or a partial substitute for green grass. The chicks are moved to the brooder, which has been heated for a day or so, when 48 hours old. The first day in the brooder they are allowed to drink what lukewarm water they desire. Use plenty of fountains, or at least one to each hundred chicks.

We have been in hopes of recommending a method of feeding from hoppers only, but up to the present we have had less mortality by a system of feeding moist mash at regular intervals. After two weeks the chicks are weaned over gradually, to the hopper method.

The grain mash mixture, consists of 200 pounds of corn meal; 100 pounds of good grade of shorts; and 100 pounds of bone meal. No small scratch grains are fed on the start. When chicks are 72 hours old, begin feeding. The first day, or the second day in the brooder, give from two to three feeds, upon a clean board. A board three feet long and about four or five inches wide will allow roughly, 75 chicks to feed. The mash mixture, consists of a small size and about one ounce of dry mash mixture to 6 chicks. This ounce of feed is moistened with sour milk curds, or semi-solid buttermilk, and spread on clean boards. The boards are taken up and cleaned after each feed.

After this day, a regular schedule is followed: Daylight, mash moistened with sour milk curds; 9 a.m., mash moistened with canned tomatoes; 11 a.m., mash moistened with hard-boiled eggs; 1 p.m., mash, moistened with sour milk curds; 3 p.m., mash moistened with sour milk curds; night, mash moistened with hard-boiled eggs.

Add a teaspoonful of cod liver oil to the tomatoes for each 500 chicks daily. Increase the amount gradually, but do not over feed. Keep the chicks hungry, but give all a chance to eat.

On the seventh day, place before them a mash in a shallow box or other container, composed of the following ingredients: 700 corn chop, 500 shorts, 300 cut chop, 45 lbs. of bone meal, 45 lbs. of fine oyster shell, 8 lbs. of alfalfa meal, 1 pint of cod liver oil to 100 lbs. of feed. The oil may be sprayed on, or to many it is easier to mix the pint of oil with some corn meal and then spread this through the entire mixture.

With the use of the self-feeders, the number of feeds may be reduced. There are two essentials to remember. The chicks should have 1 lb. of semi-solid buttermilk to each 4 lbs. of meal, and 1 pint of cod liver oil to each 100 lbs. of feed.

Give the chicks all they can eat every night, after the first two or three days.

Tomatoes may be expensive to buy, if you have not home canned, but they put pep in the flock. Mined small potatoes, or peelings mined are good once a day.

If you wish to give exercise, use about a tablespoonful of commercial chick scratch grain two or three times a day to two hundred chicks.

Many of the prepared chick feeds are good and should be fed according to the directions of the manufacturer.

Let the chicks out of doors as soon as the weather permits. Some direct sunlight assists the chicks in growth and digesting the feed. When the green grass comes, allow the chicks outside runs as soon as they will go out doors.

Do not raise chicks on the same ground as you used for fowls last year. Intestinal worms, etc., may be in the ground. It is desirable to raise the chicks on new ground each year, if possible. Many chicks are ruined by rearing on infected soil.

Hints for the Household

For April

Readers, Note: If you have any questions concerning Recipes, and other Household Hints you would like to ask Betty Webster—address her in care of The Durham Chronicle.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Hint on Child Care

When children first learn to toddle around—it is most fascinating to them. They are thrilled with their achievements and have no sense as to direction or distance. A mother likes to have her child enjoy its freedom, but too frequently a busy mother finds her child has disappeared before she knows it.

I find it very successful in caring for a child of this age to tie a bell on its neck or arm, so that while I am working I can unconsciously know my child is near by the constant tinkle, and when I miss this cheery ring, I immediately go in search of my baby.

Potato Hint

Do you always think it's necessary in order to fry left-over potatoes that you have to cut them up? I did for a long while. But occasionally and for a change, I like to put my left-over potatoes in a frying pan and press the potatoes down several times with a wire potato masher. This softens them sufficiently, and I fry and season them the same as I would any cold potatoes.

COOKING HINTS

Asparagus and Poached Eggs

Boil asparagus until tender. Make required number pieces of toast. Butter toast and keep warm.

Lay toast on platter. Place asparagus on top of toast. Season with butter, salt and pepper. Poached desired number of eggs in the same water you cooked the asparagus. Place eggs on top of asparagus and serve.

French Fried Onions

Peel large onions. Cut them in slices about one-fourth inch thick. Soak about one-half hour in half milk and half water. Drain. Dry in a frying pan and press the potatoes down several times with a wire potato masher. This softens them sufficiently, and I fry and season them the same as I would any cold potatoes.

Cake Frosting a la California

Stir together powdered sugar and orange juice. Spread on cake. Some ground nuts added to frosting makes it extra delicious.

BAKING HINTS

Date Muffins

1/4 cup of shortening, 2 tablespoons of sugar.

RELICS OF THE PAST

While looking through some old papers recently, Mr. W. C. Hall of Shelburne came across a couple of sale bills that are an interesting reminder of other days. Both bills are in an excellent state of preservation. The oldest one, what printers call a quarter sheet, printed by The Brampton Standard, a paper defunct we don't know how many years ago, was signed by J. P. Gummis, as solicitor, and was to advertise a mortgage sale to take place at Matthews' Hotel, Orangeville, on July 20, 1858, (or nearly 68 years ago). The property advertised to be sold under mortgage was lot 15, concession 2, Amaranth, 200 acres, "to secure the sum of one hundred and fourteen pounds of lawful money of Canada and interest." It will be noticed that the people didn't talk in dollars and cents in those days; and nowadays it isn't considered necessary to name the amount of a mortgage in such advertising. The second bill is eleven years younger. It is a half sheet bill, the same size as the ordinary sale bills in this district today. The bill announces a Great Credit Sale on lot 32, concession 1, Amaranth, on Tuesday, October 26, 1869, at 10 a.m. sharp, William Hall, senior, proprietor, and E. McLean, auctioneer, and was printed by the Orangeville Sun. One item on the bill which attracted our attention was, "I combined reaper, with self-rake on reel." This, Mr. Hall informs us, was one of the first of the modern reapers, and took two men to operate—one to drive and one to stand in a boxed space behind the rake. William Hall, senior, was the father of Mr. W. C. Hall, and was the pioneer from whom Hall's Corners got its name. "E. McLean, Auctioneer," was Emory McLean, Orangeville. It will be noticed that in those days, the auction sales started at 10 a.m. Nowadays the common time is 1 o'clock. —Orangeville Banner.
