Canada's Key Problem

The Creation of a Unanimous and Vigilant Public Demand for a Comprehensive and Constructive National Colonization Policy.

AS SEEN BY CHARLES W. PETERSON, CALGARY, ALTA.

The Seventh of a Series of Special Articles to Appear From Time to Time Exclusively in THE CHRONICLE

AN ADVISORY BOARD OF COLONIZATION

At the last Dominion Board of Trade Convention in Winnipeg, a resolution was unanimously passed urging a vigorous immigration policy as a means of solving Canada's industrial, transportation and taxation problems. This resolution recommended the immediate creation of a small, non-political advisory board or commission on colonization and agricultural development, composed of Canada's leading experts on the subject and skilled executives, such persons to be invited to contribute their time as a matter of public service and without compensation other than expense allowances.

NATIONAL SERVICE ITS OWN REWARD

When this request was presented to the Federal Government, the Prime Minister is said to have expressed some doubt as to whether the right type of men would be willing to render national services on the basis suggested. The functions of such a body would not be administrative, but purely advisory, and it can scarcely be doubted that Canada's most outstanding men would cheerfully accept this responsibility without compensation.

In fact, the services of such men could never be obtained by the Government on any salary basis within the customary limits of govern-

FOLLOW AUSTRALIA'S LEAD

The average Canadian voter, while tacitly agreeing that an energetic immigration effort is highly desirable, is very far from an adequate realization of the vital importance of ending the present "waiting on Providence." The problem of population is by far the greatest that faces Canada, and an advisory board, bringing fresh minds to bear on the subject, could render services of incalculable value to the state. Government "commissions" have never been popular in Canada. But one finds it difficult to understand what objections could be raised to "commandeering" our best brains and experience to focus its efforts on our most vital national problem. Australia has recently followed this sensible and efficient course.

GEORGEOUS DRESS IS HIGH LIGHT OF RUSSIAN FEATURE

"Siberia" Brings to Screen Outstanding Foibles of Court Life in and Near Petrograd.

Many gorgeous costume plays have been staged before the all-seeing eye of the camera, but it is doubtful whether anything yet filmed will measure up to the beauty of the uniforms worn by Edmund Lowe, Tom Santchi, Paul Panzer, Daniel Makarenko and others in "Siberia." Fox Films' version of Bartley Campbell's thrilling play of troubled Russia. This Fox feature comes to the Veterans' Star Theatre Friday and Saturday, July 2 and 3.

Lowe is cast as a dashing lieutenant of the Czar's Guard, and this part calls for daring dress. He wore striking uniforms in "The Winding Stair," and he was extremely colorful in "The Palace of Pleasure," but the Siberian play finds him resplendent in green, red, brown and gold. He wears twelve uniforms, each specially fitted, and there are five marvelous capes. These are fur-lined and trimmed with the richest satin.

Tom Santchi, a powerful figure and chief of the Cossacks, wears full-length black coats trimmed in silver and lined with pink satin. The breast decorations, where the Cossacks formerly carried their cartridges, are hand-trimmed with silver lace. Daniel Makarenko, cast as the governor, makes a majestic appearance in green, red and gold. Lou Tellegen, a fiery revolutionist, dresses plainly. He wears dull black and dark blue—but scores of captains, lieutenants and line officers wear the most striking uniforms obtainable.

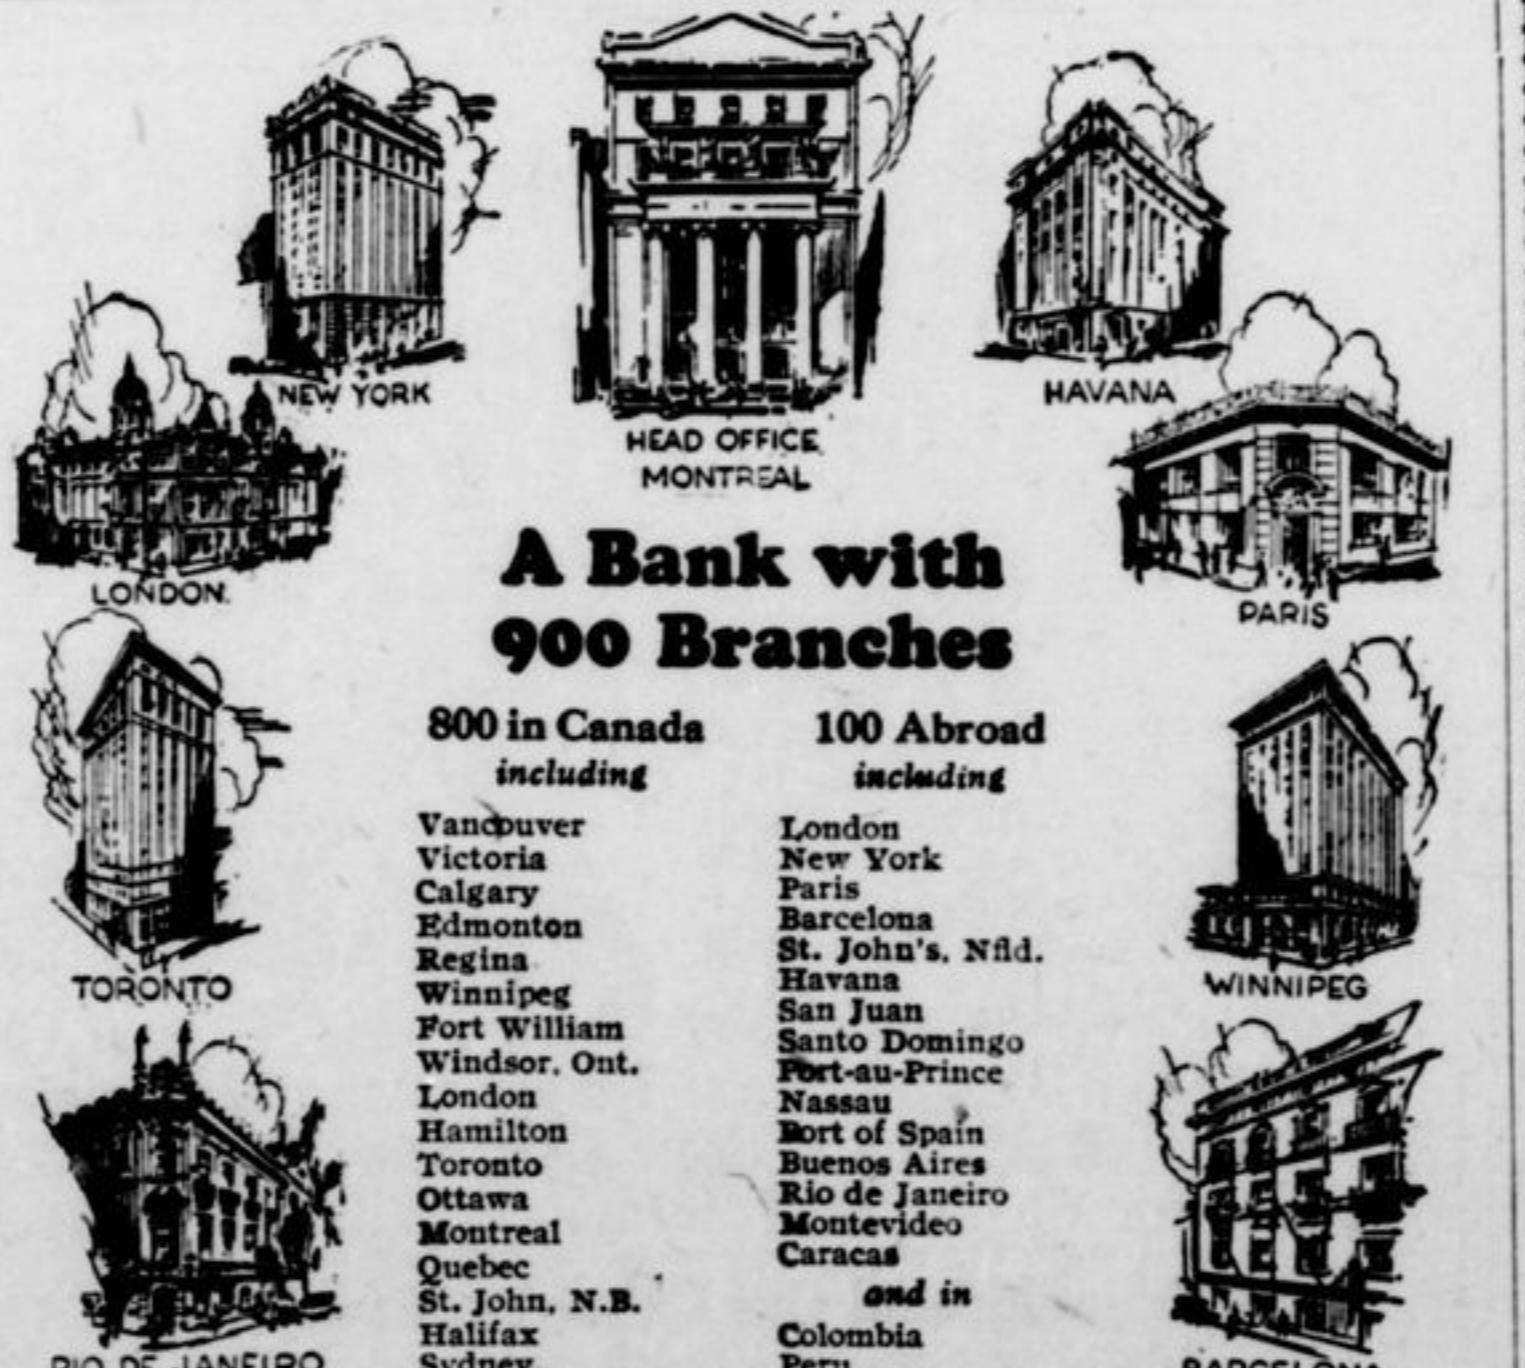

According to Makarenko, who served on the late Czar's staff, the Victor Schertzinger production is one of the most authentic pictures ever filmed in America. Makarenko declared the uniforms were perfect and the trappings ideal. Even the medals were reproduced with exact fidelity from samples supplied by Makarenko from his private collection.

BARLEY AS A HAY CROP

The use of barley as a hay crop has not received as much attention as to the present as its importance would seem to warrant. L. H. Newman, Dominion Cerealist. This has been due partly because of the satisfactory results obtained from oats grown for this purpose. The only apparent advantage that barley might have over oats when grown for hay purposes lies in the fact that barley may be sown later in the season than it is usually wise to sow oats. In Eastern Canada, particularly, it often happens that new meadows are seriously winter-killed, with the result that farmers are confronted with the problem of growing some other crop from which satisfactory hay may be made. With the rush of the spring, these damaged meadows cannot usually be ploughed and prepared for seeding until most of the other work is completed. By this time, the season will be advanced to a period when the sowing of oats would be considered a doubtful practice. In such cases, barley might be sown to advantage, providing suitable varieties are available.

Information is lacking as to what extent the beards of our commonly grown bearded varieties are objectionable where the crop is cut green and cured for hay. Data thus far accumulated on this point would seem to indicate the wisdom of continuing our efforts in the direction of producing satisfactory varieties both for grain and hay, and which do not possess objectionable awns.

It takes money to start a business, but it will stop without any.

Rolling Home at Sunset

After a wonderful weekend on Ontario roads

No speed records were made—for it was a trip of wholesome enjoyment. Two days in the vigorous outdoors—in friendly farming country, through alluring woodlands, through fascinating villages and towns.

The trip will be remembered by what was seen, not by the speed at which the road was covered. With moderate driving, every beauty spot was enjoyed; every panorama was appreciated.

There is good sense and good business in moderate driving in the country. Good sense, because it enables you to see everything as you go along. Good business because excessive speed is dangerous and destroys the road surfaces. As the cost of road maintenance is borne by you and other motorists, you are interested in helping along this movement to preserve Ontario's roads.

Those who persist in breaking the speed laws will find a numerous traffic patrol on the highways, whose duty it is to rigidly enforce the law.
