H. R. KOCH'S DEATH

The funeral on Monday afternoon from Knox United Church to ham cemetery was largely attended. A number of his old schoolmates and friends from all sections, and services were in charge of Rev. H. Smith, the pastor, who presided over a fitting service from the stately Belanus Home, where all the Jesus Christ would have been expected to have lived. It was a sorrow and trouble. Long the had been heard, our brother's name.

When Jesus heard the news about two days still in the place without answering their quest or coming to their aid. One would not wonder if the ters had a suspicion of Jesus for them. But there was a man in their sorrow, and if we believe that God has a purpose for it is easier to bear sorrow. It is stated that there was a four purpose to be worked out of sorrow. First of all, it was the best illustration of God's life his own glory and the highest glory of his life. It was the best illustration of God's sorrow upon Job, but God's mercy did not fail in the need.

Again, this sorrow was for the sake of the disciples. They were strengthened and for strengthening of their faith, necessary that the sisters suffer. We are indebted upon another, and some must suffer that others may be near to God.

Then the sorrow was for the benefit of the sisters themselves. "Said I not unto thee that thou wouldst believe that thou shouldst see the glory of God?" We actually see far more at midnight than midday. We see further into heaven, get a wider sweep of universe when the sun goes off. The biting frosts of the autumn drive our birds to the sunny sea and all these sorrows are expiring to drive us back upon God, to depend upon him absolutely and find in him our every need and rest. If our treasure is in here then our heart will be broken, shall find heaven in our heart. The sisters must needs suffer, that many unbelievers be brought to a living faith in Christ, and we might all rejoice in the loss, with a heart full of sorrow, in loss, when in heart if through it all others are brought to a consciousness of their need of God and find salvation.

Rev. Mr. Smith made beautiful mention in his closing prayer of Mr. Koch's home life, of his fullness to duty in business and the community life, of his
