QUESTIONS ASKED AND ANSWERED

Miss Agnes Macphail and Watson Griffin Cross Swords in Defense of Principles.

In the July 21 issue of The Mail and Empire, Miss Agnes Macphail said, in replying to a letter by Mr. Watson Griffin:

"Mr. Watson Griffin, F.R.G.S., F.F.S.A., in a brief article on the editorial page of your issue of Saturday, July 17, has this to say: 'Everyone knows that Miss Agnes Macphail, Progressive, was in sympathetic co-operation with the Liberal party during the whole period of her Parliamentary career, until she voted censuring the Mackenzie King Administration.'

"Mr. Griffin is not well informed on this question. As an independent U. F. O. member, I have voted on the merits of each question as it arose. It will be quite amusing to members of the 14th Parliament to hear of my sympathy with the Liberal party. In the four years we had 13 divisions, and 49 times I voted against the Liberals. I was several times absent, when, as the lists clearly show, I would have registered my vote against the Liberals.

During the 15th Parliament, we agreed to co-operate with the Liberal party on a legislative basis. We openly sought good legislation, and offered support to the party willing to give us the legislation we sought; yet that did not prevent me voting against the Liberals when I thought the public's good demanded it, as the records will show.

"From the fact that I voted against the King Government, Mr. Griffin concludes that the Governor-General acted constitutionally in refusing Mr. King dissolution. Does Mr. Griffin think that the people of Canada were not capable of rendering judgment on Mr. King's action? Does he contend that the Mother Country must maintain a governor-general to judge for us?"

Following is Mr. Griffin's reply as it appeared in the issue of July 26:

"Miss Agnes Macphail asks these questions: 'Does Mr. Griffin think that the people of Canada were not capable of rendering the judgment on Mr. King's action? Does he contend that the Mother Country must maintain a Governor-General to judge for us?'

The answer to the first question is that the people of Canada will render their judgment on Mr. King's action on the 14th of September, and in spite of the efforts of Liberal "constitutional lawyers" to befog the issue, the verdict of the Canadian people is likely to be so decisive that no Canadian Premier will ever again try to throttle Parliament to prevent a vote of censure of his government for maladministration of the public service.

A Premier who tries to throttle Parliament is as dangerous as a King who tries to make himself absolute. I commend to the consideration of Miss Agnes Macphail the words of Milton, which may be applied most appropriately to the attempt of William Lyon Mackenzie King to force the dissolution of Parliament to prevent a vote of censure. "Grant him this," said Milton, "and the Parliament has no more freedom than if it sat in his nose, which when he pleases to draw together with one twitch of his negative shall throttle a whole nation."

Monarchs who desired to be absolute rulers were at one time the greatest menace to democracy; but in the present age, the greatest danger is from dictators who try to encroach upon the rights and privileges of Parliaments elected by the people. The rise of dictatorships in Europe since the war is one of the amazing facts of the age. On the 14th of September the Canadian people will declare emphatically that they do not want a Mackenzie King dictatorship.

The answer to Miss Macphail's second question is that the Mother Country does not maintain a Governor-General in Canada. The people of Canada maintain the Governor-General. He is selected jointly by the Canadian Government and the British Government, the object of this method of selection being to secure as representative of the King in Canada, one who will be no more tinged with Canadian politics than the hereditary King is tinged with British politics. The system has worked well in the past, but in view of the present attempts to arouse popular prejudice against the Governor-General, I personally believe that it would be advisable to prevent such agitations in the future by having the Governor-General appointed directly by the King, whose representative he is. I have advocated this method of appointment in the past as more in consonance with our status as one of the equal nations of the British Empire. However, the present Governor-General, like his predecessors, has acted as impartially as if he had been chosen directly by the King to represent him in Canada.

Having answered the questions of Miss Agnes Macphail, I take the liberty of asking her a question. Does Miss Macphail think that the Governor-General should have prevented the Parliament elected by the people from expressing condemnation of the Government's failure of the Customs department, although the Premier and his colleagues knew about the wrong-doing for many months? This is what MacKenzie King asked the Governor-General to do when he demanded dissolution. In other words, should the Governor-General have throttled Parliament to save the Premier?

A he-man is one who grows defiantly before doing what his wife suggests.

Meandering with Marjorie

By MARJORIE ADAMS

This month I think I have given you more recipes than anything else, but I can't resist telling you this foundation for any fruit ice.

Here is the recipe for twelve people: Boil 2 cups of granulated sugar and 2 cups of water to a thin syrup. Add this to the juice of two lemons, strained, other fruit juice and 2 cups of cold water.

Pack and freeze. If necessary to keep it for several hours, dissolve one package of unflavored gelatin and add to mixture while hot.

The proportions of fruit to add are: 1. Juice of six oranges, strained. If desired grate in some of the rind. 2. Juice and pulp of six peaches (mashed).

3. Six teaspoons of strawberries, mashed to a pulp. 4. Five and one-half teaspoons of Concord grapes, washed and boiled for five minutes with one cup of water. Strain before adding to syrup.

Advance Thanksgiving Hint

Have you ever had fresh watermelon for Thanksgiving dinner? I know that November is a long way off, but this treat is the sort of thing you must prepare in advance.

Select, preferably as near the end of the season as possible, because you won't have to keep it so long, a firm melon on which the rind has not been broken. Wash and dry it carefully.

Then dip the melon into cool, melted paraffin making sure that every part of it is completely coated. Let it harden, and then put the melon in a cool place where it will keep until wanted.

I have never tried to save a melon after Christmas day, but there is no reason why one will not keep almost indefinitely in a dry, cool spot. (If you have a cellar, that is the ideal storage place for the vegetable).

A Practical Mop

I saw the most amusing and useful thing today. It was a mop, but different than any I'd ever seen. The mop part was fastened on to the stick and arranged in such a way that it could be wrung out by the user without danger of getting her hands wet.

Dainty Lemonade Sets

"HOG GOLF"

(By Plus Four)

"Hog golf" is a game that was invented during the war. The rules were made to fit the circumstances. The quartermaster of an artillery unit took two golf clubs and a supply of golf balls with him when he went to France. He could never explain just why he had done it.

But he had them. There was no golf course near the line. But a farmer had some hogs in a field adjoining the quartermaster's hut. One day a group of men thought out a novel scheme of a golf course.

They got a bucket of whitewash. Then they went out and painted a number on nine of the hogs. Then they got the golf clubs and started to play. The rules were ingenious.

The first tee was placed at a corner of the field. Instead of hitting out, the player had to hit the hog bearing the number of whatever hole he happened to be playing. Naturally they always started at No. 1.

There were no artificial bunkers. But there were plenty of hazards. A player might play a perfect approach, but the dropping ball would scare the hog, and he would run to the other end of the field. In that event, the perfect approach would be wasted.

Again, a player might be "dead", when his opponent would "hole out" by hitting the hog. The struck animal would run, and the player whose ball had been "dead" would find he was farther away from the "hole" than ever. The tee for the next "hole" would be wherever the preceding hog had been hit. Another hazard was the exploding of shells. Whenever one would go off nearby, the hogs would get frightened and gallop away to another end of the "course."

Par for the round of nine hogs was never computed.

A man isn't really old until his mother has stopped worrying about him.
