In the erection of the poles, these men would have charge, and the company would settle with them for the poles erected in their individual territory, as this would be much better than dealing with the individual farmers, some of whom would supply three or four poles, white others might supply less, or more, as the case might be. The company would sooner pay for the poles in bulk, and the foreman appointed in turn could settle with the individuals.

MR. KING "VIEWS WITH ALARM"

Hamilton Herald (Independent)

Mackenzie King has made many good speeches, but it is doubtful if Dornoch. An extension also will in his whole political career he everspoke from the platform as effecover to a point a short distance west ing, when he delivered the first of his addresses in the present election Line No. 609 on the Provincial campaign. It was indeed a masterfrom a point near the Rocky to the the facts well marshalled, the argupresentation of the case for the Lib-South of Durham on the Provin- eral party, it was not convincing to -a "purple patch" of florid elocial Highway, Line No. 602 is to anyone who is familiar with the leader's arguments and appeals.

Before all the issues in this cam-

The fellow awakened unusual procedure following upon his wife and said they had better an dissolution, he places all the blame upon Mr. Meighen, assuming that the governor-general acted upon his advice. Thus Mr. King escapes the charge of attacking the crown In Mr. King's eyes, the sin of the Conservative leader is so monstrous as to be unforgivable. In undertaking to administer the affairs of the nation with his "shadow cabinet," consisting of ministers who bad not been sworn in, and in "in sulting" Parliament by summarily dismissing it without the formality of prorogation. Mr. Meighen was guilty of conduct almost unparalleled in its autocratic heinousness. The above will give some idea of "I know of nothing comparable to the proposed plans and will show it in British history since the days No. 6.-Hugh McLean, Bentinck, Chronicle readers in a rough man- is not a vestige of constitutional right or power which it does not

After that statement it is not surprising to find that in the opinion of the Liberal leader, "in the present contest the constitutional issue surpasses all others in its significance and importance"-that it "constitutes an issue such as has not been raised in a British country since the day of the Petition of Right and the Bill of Rights," Which is to say that it is the gravest constitutional issue which has developed in connection with British parliamentary government in the last 300 We doubt if Mr. King will succeed in making the Canadian people believe that Arthur Meighen has struck a death blow at the Britsh Constitution, and that that venerable insituion may suffer paralysis and swift decay unless the people of Canada rise in their might and rebuke the Cromwellian Tory leader by voting against him and all candidates who support him. So far, there is not the slightest evidence of public alarm or excitement on the subject. And besides, there are other issues to which, although they may seem to Mr. King of little moment, the Canadian people are likely to give some consideration. However, Mr. King's peroration on the Britsh constitution and the frightful effects which may be produced by tampering with it is a really attractive piece of rhetoric quence such as young students of oratory love to recite.
