Meandering with Marjorie

By MARJORIE ADAMS

The effects of Thanksgiving never get a chance to efface themselves thoroughly because we are plunging immediately into the excitement of the preparation for Christmas Day and New Years Day. To-day I'm going to talk mostly about the Christmas dinner and give you some recipes.

Of course, the turkey or goose is the time honored dish and undoubtedly the most essential part of the meal. Some of us are fortunate enough in being able to raise our own but I think the most of us have to depend upon the word of the butcher, whom we trust as reliable or upon our own judgment.

Selecting the Bird

I have heard of various methods of judging fowl and the favorites seem to be by means of the breastbone. It is said that if the breastbone is tender the rest of the turkey is, too. However this is not infallible and perhaps your cherished mode is even better.

It is well, however, to get a bird with a nice layer of fat underneath the skin, for this will prevent the dry flavorless taste that many restaurants have.

Usually your butcher will clean the fowl thoroughly and remove most of the pin feathers. Still it is a good plan for the cook to examine it again and make sure that all parts which are not edible are removed, and to singe it to rid the skin of any hair which may have been overlooked.

Dressing Recipe

A simple dressing for any fowl is made of stale bread soaked in water and squeezed to remove all excess moisture. Into this beat one or two eggs, depending on the size of the cavity to be filled; mix in a pinch of leaf thyme, a small onion—chopped, and salt and pepper to taste.

Sprinkle the fowl with salt and pepper; placing in a roasting pan—self-basting, if possible, because it is much easier—and roast until tender. The time you will have to cook the turkey will vary, of course, on the size of your fowl as well as its age; so I will not attempt to advise you blindly but suggest that you let your butcher be your guide.

The vegetables and salad for the dinner, I will discuss in another article; so I'll pass them by, to-day. However, drinks and desserts are important factors, too, and I'll touch on those instead. Water, I think, should be served at every meal, and cider, too, is appropriate. Coffee is best served as a demi-tasse. As for desserts, plum pudding holds first place.

As for any extras which you may or may not wish to serve, such as scalloped oysters and creamed onions with the dinner of nuts, fruit, and candy after the dessert—use discretion! You know, there is nothing more fatal to a pleasant afternoon or evening, than the lazy dull feeling that follows a too heavy meal.

ANNUAL MENACE OF MICE AND RABBITS

M. B. Davis of the Division of Horticulture at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, gives Expert Opinion as How Best to Prevent Destruction of Fruit Trees

Not a year goes by that there are not numerous complaints of heavy loss of fruit trees due to the ravages of mice and rabbits. Injury from mice is comparatively easy to control. The succulent bark of the young tree is particularly tasty to them in the lean months of winter, but as they are under the snow and do not climb the trees, some means of protection will prevent their damage. Ordinary building paper does very well, not the tarred, but the plain grey building paper. Cut this in strips 6 inches or three inches wide and tie around the trunk of the young trees, banking up around the bottom with a little earth. A better and more permanent way is to use wire protectors, made from either galvanized wire or a fine mesh or expanded metal lath. Cut this into strips about 18 inches high and 18 inches or so wide to allow for expansion of the tree, and fasten with small pieces of wire. This material will last several years without replacing, and insures adequate protection against mice and against rabbits as far as the material reaches, but rabbits have the faculty of getting on top of the snow and chewing the branches above the snow line. This makes protection a rather difficult matter. There is not any really good treatment for rabbits, but the following poison has met with some success and is worth trying: white arsenic, 1 part; corn meal, 3 parts. Mix thoroughly and spread about the area to be protected. A repellent which has also been used with varying success is as follows: unshaken lime, 20 pounds; flowers of sulphur, 15 pounds; water 40 pounds. Apply this to the trunks with a brush.

GET ALL THE RED CLOVER SEED

Experimental Farms Note
The tests which have been conducted by the Dominion Experimental Farms with red clover from different sources indicate to a marked degree the advantage of home-grown seed over the great bulk of imported varieties.

This being the case the growers of red clover will perform a valuable service to Canadian agriculture by sowing as much seed as possible each year. For the past few years it has been necessary for Canadian growers to import large quantities of seed, and this year promises little improvement in this connection.

A very appreciable amount of red clover seed is lost each year during harvesting and threshing operations. At least a part of these losses are avoidable. It is too late at the present time to take care of losses due to harvesting but it is not too late to avoid losses due to threshing.

It has been the experience of the Forage Crop Division of the Central Experimental Farm that the threshing of red clover during rainy seasons is usually accompanied by an appreciable amount of unthreshed seed going through the mill. This is the result of the clover taking up moisture from the air and consequently not shelling because of not being really dry. To secure the maximum quantity of seed it is advisable to either thresh before the rainy season has started, or else put off threshing until after the heavy frosts have come with their drying effect.

The careful cleaning of seed once it is threshed will also make available for the market much material that would otherwise have to be discarded because of weed seeds or dirt.

"WHERE WAS I?" IS FILM FULL OF COSTLY FUN

Expensive Wreckage is Grim Evidence of the High Cost of Laughing.

There is a world of real humor in "Where Was I?", the Universal Jewel starring Reginald Denny, which is coming to the Veteran Star Theatre, Friday and Saturday, December 3 and 4.

There is also an unusual story with wonderful opportunities for the manufacturing of laughs. William Seiter, director, has turned out a finished product, according to those who have seen this riotous Denny-drama.

Chester Conklin, Leo Moran, Otto Harlan, Pauline Garon, Marian Nixon, William Turner, Tom Lingman, Arthur Lake and James Corrigan all contribute to the general comedy of this piece.

No Doubt!

The teacher had been giving a very graphic account of the reindeer, habits and uses. One boy, however, was not paying the slightest attention, so the teacher asked—

"Now, what is the use of the reindeer?"

The startled urchin looked up and said:

"It makes everything in the garden lovely, teacher."

A lady engaged a new maid and found her asleep for the third time in one afternoon in the kitchen rocking chair.

"What, asleep again, Hattie?" said the lady, completely out of patience.

"When I engaged you, you told me you were never tired."

"No, ma'am, an' I ain't," replied Hattie. "But I should be if I didn't sleep."
