DUNDALK

In the early spring of 1926 Lewis Decker, a pioneer resident of Dundalk, was seized with a paralytic stroke, from which he rallied after a few months and was able to be out and down town in the latter part of the summer. In the fall he and his wife went for a few week's visit with friends in Meaford and Thornbury district. They were on their way home when Mr. Decker Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stuart, suffered a NAMED DADTY IFAD their way home when Mr. Decker took very ill a few weeks ago while at the home of his nephew, Mr. Emerson Nixon, near Woodford, He passed away on Thursday as the result of heart trouble and dropsy. The deceased was born at Meaford about 72 years ago and has been a respected resident of this village for 47 years. He was a wagon maker in the early days and later a carpenter. He is survived by his widow and one son and three brothers.

FLESHERTON

Reeve J. A. Hogarth was again returned ashead of Artemesia Council, but by a decreased majority from last year, he being opposed by Mr. Alexander Cameron of Eugenia, who was fathering the abolition of statute labor. Mr. Herbert Corbett of last year's Council, tried conclusions with Deputy-Reeve Alex. Carruthers and was successful by a substantial majority. The council had been returned by acclamation and is composed of T. L. Mercer, J. A. Davis of last year's council and Mr. Wm. McMillan, who takes Mr.

Corbett's place. The by-law for abolishing statute labor received a better reception than last year, but was again unsuccessful in carrying, being defeated by a vote of 366 for, to 3950
