CURIOUS MARRIAGE

Generally speaking, the idea of a wedding is a conventional one but there are cases on record where the tastes of some people have not agreed with this. Indeed, there have been some very eccentric and very romantic marriage ceremonies solemnized. Men and women, the very opposinte in character and disposition, have been united, sometimes the union proving a happy of Washington, ocean meteorologist who married an American giantess. He too, stood 6 ft. 7 in. The pair, when they appeared in public, used to receive as much as £150 a week. But possibly the most unconventional and peculiar marriage ceremony on record was that performed years ago by the Consular Agent at Cincinnati. The bridegroom was a well-to-do resident of that town, and the bride lived in Italy. When the wedding was performed the contracting parties were thousands of miles apart. The Consul filled in a blank certificate, which was forwarded by him to the authorities in Italy, who. in the presence of the parish priest exhibited it before the bride, who in turn affixed her signature, accepting it as her action the marriage became perfectly binding, although, of course, the newly-married couple could not possibly live together for quite a little time owing to the distance they were apart.

Crusoe Knew What He Wanted And He Got It

One of the most persistent advertisers in the history of success was Robinson Crusoe. He knew what he wanteda ship—so he put up an ad. for one. He flung up a shirt on a pole, at the top of his island. That, in the language of the sea, was plain to every seafaring man.

The circulation was small, there was no other medium but Crusoe kept at it despite the fact that he got no enquirers for a long time. He changed his copy as one garment after another was frayed out, and in the end got what he wanted.

Crusoe used the best medium at his disposal. .. The best
