JUST LIKE A MAN— By Gene Knott

AVERAGE LIFE OF CAR IS NOW EIGHT YEARS

Modern Methods Increase Durability of the Automobile.
Though some people may still be found who are sure they made "super cars" in days gone by, the fact remains that the average of motor car life has increased until today it is greater than ever. An interesting sidelight is that longer life has been achieved notwithstanding the fact that cars get harder usage and are driven more miles in a year.

Few realize just how much the average life of motor cars has lengthened as the years have passed, and the best way to bring it graphically to their attention is to cite the facts and figures.

Away back when the automobile was in the "clumsy pup" stage— even though some people are sure they built super-cars—then the average life of a car was five years. As the industry progressed and the building of automobiles advanced the span of life was increased to six and one-half years, and since then it has raised still further to eight years.

Nor is it surprising that this tendency towards longer life has come about. Inferior materials which characterized cars of the early days have given way to almost miraculous advances in lighter weight materials of infinitely greater strength per pound, and a refinement and perfection of design which produces greater power, speed and pep, quietness and all-round superior performance. Greater strength and a reduction of vibration and friction have resulted in longer car-life.

Home, Sweet Home
There was once a certain bachelor who believed that a deep and profound reverence for home was a thing that all her pupils should be made to feel.

"Who can give me a definition of home?" she asked the class one day.

There was a distinct silence, it could almost be felt.

"Surely," continued the teacher, "surely some of you must have an idea."

A small boy stood up.

"Home," he answered, "is the building which usually stands in front of the garage."

Other Papers' Opinions
Paying All the Time
The man who pays Dominion income tax is only mulcted at certain intervals. The man trying to raise a family pays no income tax, but he is paying to Government revenue in sales tax, customs duties, etc., on everything the several odd members of his family require. The income taxpayer has the advantage. —St. Catharines Standard.
Celebrate by Planting Trees
The national committee, for the jubilee celebration of Confederation suggests that a maple tree be planted on July 1st at every place where a celebration is held. A tree planting ceremony might appropriately be a feature of centennial celebration. If the place and the tree or trees were carefully chosen, the result might be a living arch spanning the next century.—Wingham Advance Times.
Where Energy Goes
One-third of the energy from the engine of an automobile is lost to the cooling water, another third to the exhaust gases, and about two thirds of the remainder is used in overcoming friction, road and wind resistance and excess power take up the rest.

ORIGIN OF THE WORD "NEWS"

Julius Caesar may be said to have founded the first "newspaper", but this was in the form of waxed tablets upon the surface of which the "Acts of the Roman Senate" were scratched with pointed tools by trained writers known as tabularii. The Acts of the Senate gradually developed into a publication of general news, named "Acts of the City." But, even before the time of Caesar the Egyptians and the Chinese referred to the word "news" in their literary works.

The word in English, however, has originated from various sources. Before the advent of printed newspapers, written messages and dispatches were carried from town to town by "news reporters" riding on horseback. In course of time this system is said to have led up to the practice of posting important news items on boards in public places, such as the local inns, the "town hall," the stations from which stages departed, etc. According to historical notes in the old English books, came the time when the written news items were pinned or pasted upon the bulletin boards under the four different letter-headings, as: N, E, W, S. Under the letter "N" public occurrences in the north part of the country were placed. Happenings in the east were placed under the "E" column. In the "W" column news from the west was given, while in the space under the "S" were placed reports from the south.

Eventually these four letters of the compass were joined together to form the word "news" as it is known today. And from this word the compound word, "news-paper" was gradually formed.

Adjusting the Change
A friend was showing a Scotchman around his cutlery works at Sheffield. Here's a souvenir for you, Mac," he said when his visit was over, and handed him a pocket knife. "But," he said, "you'll have to give me a half-penny for it, so that it cannot cut our friendship."
With some reluctance the Scot searched his pockets and at last produced a penny. "Hae ye got change?" he asked anxiously. "Sorry," replied his friend, "I'm
