APPLY THE GOLDEN RULE

The Kitchener Record makes an earnest plea to automobile picnic parties in the country to apply the golden rule and observe the decencies of life. The Record points out that the thoughtlessness of uninvited guests in the country has become so common that in many districts the urban motorist is considered a nuisance.

The Record says that too many motorists feel free to pitch a temporary camp on the farmer's property, where they assume proprietary rights. Having enjoyed the contents of their lunch baskets they scatter the refuse.

Before starting for home they strip the trees of their flowers or fruit as the case may be. The farmer is left to clean up the mess and survey the damaged trees.

The Record quite properly says that the country dweller has just as much right to come into the city, select the best looking lawn, unpack his baskets under the front windows, eat his refreshments, throw the debris around, pick the finest flowers and then tie him back to the farm.

The Free Press would join with The Record in urging automobilists

TO apply the golden rule and do as they would be done by. It would save a lot of hard feeling, make for a more beautiful country and help to bring about better sentiment between rural and urban dwellers.—London Free Press.

PAINFULLY BRUISED IN FALL FROM BARN ROOF

Edward Leeson, of concession four, Minto, suffered painful injuries to his shoulder Friday while helping to instal lightning rods on Samuel Martin's barn, concession two, Minto. While on the roof of the barn, Leeson lost his foothold and dropped 35 feet, landing on his shoulder on a horse rake, which he broke by his weight. This, he says, saved his life, as otherwise he might have broken his neck on the ground. Although his shoulder was badly bruised, no serious effects will ensue.

GROWING GREEN DUCKS

(Experimental Farm's Note) A "green duck" is a young duck which has been grown very rapidly by special feeding and has attained marketable size in a comparatively short time.

The length of time required to grow green ducks depends mainly on two things, the breed of ducks used and the method of feeding.

Recent experimental work conducted by the Dominion Experimental Farms shows that ducklings of the Pekin breed will attain marketable size in about ten weeks, while those of other breeds of ducks take twelve to fifteen weeks.

Beginners would be well advised to start with Pekin ducks if they anticipate marketing green ducks.

When the ducklings are small they should be fed six times daily. Frequent feeding is necessary as young ducks are eager feeders.

When the ducklings are about two weeks old five feedings may be given daily and be continued until the ducklings have reached marketable age. Frequent feeding promotes rapid growth.

The feed used for growing ducklings at the Experimental Farm, Ottawa, is equal parts bran, shorts and cornmeal with about ten per cent beef meal added. A little charcoal, about one per cent, is also recommended. This mash should be moistened with water, but not made sticky or sloppy.

Add only sufficient water to make the meal stick together. Sprinkle coarse sand over the mash before feeding. The sand serves as grit and aids in the process of digestion. Feed only what the ducklings will eat up clean at each feeding.

After the ducklings are four or five days old some green food should be given, such as clover or alfalfa which has been freshly cut, and chopped up fine. Start with only a small amount of this material and gradually increase it until the mash contains about one-fifth green food.

When the ducklings are about six weeks old the green food should be gradually eliminated and at the commencement of the seventh week the mash should be changed to one possessing more fattening properties. The fattening mash used at Ottawa is 50 pounds cornmeal, 35 pounds shorts, and 15 pounds beef meal, with a sprinkling of coarse sand.

By the time the ducklings are ten weeks old they should be in excellent flesh and have developed their first coat of body feathers. This is the right time to market them. If they are kept longer they will change their feathers, and the rate of growth will decrease, thus increasing the cost and reducing the profit.

Experimental work at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, in 1926 indicates that Pekin ducklings averaged about six pounds each in ten weeks, and made a net profit, over cost of feed and ducklings of $1.38 each. This was at least one half pound heavier than the gain made by other breeds under similar conditions. When a fair price can be obtained for "green ducks" profits are usually good.

Girls of today don't need leading to the altar. They could find their way in the dark.—Brandon Sun.
