Glenelg and Priceville
(Our Own Correspondent)

Fine harvest weather, and harvest will be general this week, but towards the east from Durham it is later by nearly a week.

We spent a few days at the old home of our brother and sisters on the Durham Road, Glenelg, and some are not done haying yet. Hay will be a drug in the market this year as so many have a large quantity, some having from 50 to 100 loads, but sometimes it depends on the size of the loads. We notice sweet clover a good crop in general, as is alfalfa also. The apple crop is a poor one this year and those to be seen are only like marbles. Some are picking raspberries yet. They are getting to be nearly a thing of the past. Potatoes are doing very well. Fall wheat is all in the barns and was a fine crop and those having it will have to thresh to make room for the balance of their crop.

We were pleased to receive many greetings from old friends in Priceville and vicinity, but many of the old pioneers are not there now and those left are very few and far between.

The next ten days will be pretty short with the teaching class of the ladies, for there are but very few of the gentlemen to be found in the profession. Two months nowadays instead of when we went to school, two weeks. But changes have taken place and will continue to do so while the world exists. Instead of from $200 to $300 salaries for teachers, now $1,000 to $1,200, and in some instances only an average of from twelve to fifteen in a school. Not far from Durham 50 years ago the number on the roll was 160, now only 20. What a change, and the teacher only getting $275 a year. In this same school a young lady now gets $1,000.

There will be no service in St. Paul's church for possibly four Sunday days, as the parson is away on his holidays. Every person in the parish should take advantage of it to catch up with their running around, and be ready to turn in on the fall run without a hitch.

This part was well represented at the Durham Red Cross garden party on Thursday night, and all enjoyed it.

Quite a few of our citizens took in the sports at Mount Forest during Old Home Week.

While the humans are singing, "Show me the way to go home," Mr. Peter Black had a mare get out of the field a few nights ago and without instructions went straight to her former home, eight miles beyond Shelburne.

It beats all how a woman will sometimes come out of a mix-up so well, besides what a man will do. For the past six years a paper has been coming into our home called "Labor." It is a four-page weekly printed in the city of Washington. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers helped launch it and still hold considerable capital in it, and had an agreement that all members be subscribers. As they numbered about 60,000, it enabled the editor to boast that it had the largest subscription list of any labor paper in the whole world. It professed to champion the cause of both Labor and Progressives, and while it was always apparent that it was a filling station or supply tank for Miss Agnes Macphail, it was never more clearly seen than when the war broke out in China last spring. It wrote an article on the dealings of the five different nations who sent their battleships to the front to protect their subjects and their property, and to make it more forceful, in cartoon it pictured them as five big bloated capitalists, all for the sake of gain, on top of a Chinese, squeezing independence and liberty out of him, while the unselfish Russian was pictured as lending him Christian support. In a few days came Miss Macphail's letter on the war in China to the school children of South-East Grey, and just as it caused resentment in Britain's Labor paper, met with much more hostility on account of the number attacked. In an effort to justify itself it gave Miss Macphail's report of Britain's dealing with China as being almost identical with the views it held. Accompanying the article was a photo of our worthy member. But that did not frighten the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, or yet allay their anger, for at their annual convention, just closed, and held in Cleveland, they refused to renew their subscriptions with Labor, and the last we saw of it was a fortnight ago when it was offering itself to all who cared to remain with it at one dollar per year in place of the two which it received before the war. And it is just about two weeks ago that we noticed in Miss Macphail's remarks that she was experiencing a great sensation over the thought that she was probably the most noted woman in the whole Dominion of Canada. So, while she is having her whole aim and ambition of life gratified, the Labor paper that really produced the article that brought about her notoriety is being almost annihilated. Any girl craving thrills and notoriety will find that the States is surely the place to go, although we will admit that the state into which Mrs. McPherson took a trip last summer for some such purpose proved far more productive than what Washington has been.

Frances: "Just because I'm engaged to Joe, that doesn't mean I'm going to marry him."
Norah: "No, dear, of course not. He may back out."

The trouble with most statisticians is that they have a lot of facts that are not so.

GOOD PROGRAM AT RED CROSS

Local Hospital Treasury Result of Good Sum As Result of Party Given by Ladies of Cross Last Thursday Night.

With good weather, a slight breeze, and a fine moon in the work amongst the community at the time, and the party and co-operation of the countryside adjacent to Durbin annual garden party in aid of Red Cross Memorial Hospital went over with a bang, and result the coffers of the local tuition will be augmented to a large amount.

This garden party and frolic an annual affair, is put on by ladies of the Red Cross Society. As all the receipts go toward maintenance of the hospital, it naturally follows that its success of interest to many more than the actual members of the society whole town and countryside to out to ensure a big crowd bent.

The rink was crowded shortly after 8 o'clock, and with a performance going on in different sections the spectators for an hour or two were kept busy with the different attractions, offering romping the booths, and listening the music supplied for the occasion.

The garden party proper commenced at 3 o'clock in the afternoon with a softball tournament in four teams had entered. This drew a lot of interest, especially the final game between Dornoch and Knox, Normanby, teams.

The first two teams to be crowned Knox and Durham. The winners, however, proved too much for the local tossers and came off 36 runs to 15. In the next game Glenora and Dornoch took the competitors, the latter 23 to 17 in one of the best games of the day. The Knox team, Durhams completely outclassed an early lead and were never edged. The game between Glenora and Dornoch teams was very exciting and for the first two innings evenly matched, but in the middle of the contest Dornoch team got ahead and, (Continued on page 6)
