OTHER PAPERS' OPINIONS

The Real Sport Always Wins

There is a certain woman in a small Canadian town who cannot understand why folks don't like her better, and who is much hurt because so often now she is left out when there is a small and jolly party for cards. If some candid friend were to enlighten her, maybe she might yet learn to play the game and be a sport. As it is she is the sort of player who always feels that the rules of the game should be forgotten when she makes a slip. "Oh, I didn't mean to do that," she exclaims when she makes a poor play in any game, and she makes it plain that she does not expect her mistakes to be counted against her. As this is nothing more nor less than cheating she has long since worn out her welcome and moreover she has never learned to play anything well.

It all seems very childish, doesn't it? Why should a grown woman sulk unless she can have the name of winning? For the name is all she cares about. Yet the world is full of people more like her than any realize. All across Canada countless people are preparing exhibits for the fairs. Among them we fear there will be a few poor sports who will sulk if they do not win first prize, and who will criticize the judges instead of searching out the faults and flaws in their exhibits. There was a Canadian boy this summer who had the right idea. He refused to accept a prize which he felt another boy had won. To him mere possession of a prize was an empty mockery if he could not feel that he had actually come first. The true sport always plays to win, plays by the rules of the game, and then if he loses, tries more valiantly still next time. What educational value has any fair unless we profit by the mistakes as well as the successes, whether they may be made by ourselves or our competitors?—Farmer's Advocate.

Decaying Evangelism

High-power evangelism, the sort with which the name of Rev. Billy Sunday is associated, is on the wane in the United States. Evidence is forthcoming that the Protestant Churches, after long consideration and statistical investigation, have decided that the results are not commensurate with the effort. Therefore they are more and more disinclined to underwrite these campaigns, and it has been a principle with the evangelists that they will not conduct a crusade unless on the invitation of the clergymen in the city to be invaded. This cooling-out explains why the Winona Lake Association, which numbered 500 twelve years ago and included all the high-power men, each of whom was expected to conduct five campaigns a year, has now shrunk to half its size. At the annual meeting held recently President Charles Reign Seville admitted that it was becoming increasingly difficult for his colleagues to reach the big cities, and he blamed the tabernacles, the night life, the bootleggers and general lawlessness. He denied that the evangelists were themselves to blame, and quoted statistics showing that thousands of people had been converted where revivals had been held, and this included the impressive total of 69,000 which Sunday himself claimed as a result of his campaign in New York City. He arrived at the figures by counting all who "hit the sawdust trail", raised their hands or performed some other specific act which could be construed as expressing a desire to lead a better life.

But church investigators are inclined to view such statistics with a fishy eye. What concerns them is not the number of people moved emotionally for a moment as the result of the impassioned plea of a professional evangelist. How many of them are really converted? How many join churches, and above all, how many remain church members at the end of a year? The answer is that the net church membership is increased less than one per cent. as the result of evangelistic campaigns. But if it were increased but by a single member, there are those who think the effort not in vain but for the important fact that these campaigns cost money. The thousands or tens of thousands that these expert evangelists take out of a town represent money that the churches would be able to expend on other worthy causes. Rev. Sunday collects about $150,000 for a campaign and he takes it out of people who, for the most part, are connected with churches and philanthropic organizations, not from the converted sinner, who need only contribute his loudly expressed determination to flee, from the wrath to come. There is also to be taken account of the fact that many sincerely religious people are shocked by the methods employed by Billy Sunday and his kind. He is lacking in both taste and dignity, and many feel that religion is actually degraded by such performances as he gives. It is the misfortune of these evangelists that, however sincere they are, they are unable to convince everybody of their devotion, and the ungodly point to the fact—if indeed it is a fact—that Rev. Sunday is a millionaire, and that early in the present century even Rev. Sam Jones, who will be remembered in Toronto, and who, with Rev. Sam Small was the founder of the modern school of rough-house evangelism, confessed to an income of $30,000 a year. So this highly organized industry is on the wane, while the new Visitation Evangelism seems destined to take its place in the religious world.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

Tourists and Liquor Facilities

Not a few of this year's visitors—particularly visitors from across the border—have voiced a keen and discriminating interest in the liquor laws in force in the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario, respectively. So far as the obtaining of the schierewithal to quench their thirst is concerned, they seem to prefer the system in vogue in Quebec, on the ground that there is no red-tape about it. In a Quebec Liquor Commission store a bottle of liquor can be purchased with no more formality than is requisite for the purchase of a pound of tea at a grocery store—though the former emporium is liable to be more congested than the latter usually is. But in Ontario, a permit has first to be obtained for the purchase of liquor at all, and then a form has to be filled up and officially approved, on the occasion of making each purchase. As a matter of fact the difference in the mode of operations in the two Provinces very faithfully reflects the difference in viewpoint between them with regard to the sale of liquor. The Government of Ontario controls the sale, whereas in Quebec, the Government merely exercises a monopoly of sale. The provisions that strike the visitor, in a hurry to slake his thirst, as so much red-tape, are really essential to any kind of reasonable assurance that the person purchasing liquor is a fit and proper person—judged by ordinary common-sense standards—to whom liquor should be sold.

When it comes to the matter of price, however, such of our visiting friends, though on pleasure bent, have like John Gilpin, a frugal mind, prefer the Ontario price-list to that of Quebec. Speaking generally, all the wet goods compendiously spoken of as hard stuff—though the tourist from the South has good cause to know that it's harder where there's none—are cheaper in the former Province than in the latter. For example, the two best-known kinds of three-star brandy cost $3.45 a bottle in Ontario and

Her Worry Ended

They were talking about a young man who had just passed them on the street. "Yes," said one, "he fell in love with a girl at a glove shop. He bought gloves every day for a week, so to discourage his attentions she became a manicurist." "Then he had his nails manicured every day, I suppose?" remarked the other. "Just so. But I don't think he will worry her any more." "Why?" "She's found employment with a dentist."

$4.25 a bottle in Quebec; while in the latter Province, the ordinary, well-known brands of Scotch whiskey, selling at $3.50 and $3.55 a bottle in Ontario, cost $4.00 a bottle and over. And so it goes all along the line, so far as the hard stuff is concerned. However, as regards wines, some slight price advantage seems to rest with Quebec—as a matter of fact, the French-Canadians usually drink wine in preference to spirits of any kind. But social observers have failed to note that the summer-time sojourner in their midst seems disposed to learn from them in this respect. The French-Canadian likes to sip and dawdle over his wine—he is no hustler at imbibing. The tourist, on the other hand, likes to bolt his "hooker", potent and in small compass, and get on with the tour.—Toronto Saturday Night.

HOLSTEIN BOWLERS HELD TOURNAMENT

Pleasant Evening Spent by Local Club Last Friday Night at Which Prizes Were Awarded.

The bowlers of Holstein, like those of every other town or village in Ontario, have spent a very pleasant summer season on their greens, and aside from the pleasurable evenings at home the local tournaments in the country round-about have also been well attended by representatives of the Holstein club.

Last Friday night the first local tournament of the season was put on, when the bowling continued up to the midnight hour. The Chronicle editor and wife, called to this progressive village on business that evening, were interested participants in the tournament when the cakes were passed around and enjoyed a most pleasant and enjoyable green revellers in lending valuable assistance to the consuming of the many tasty things passed around. Always noted for their abilities in the serving of "eats", the Holstein ladies were even better on this occasion and we can truthfully say that the head and foot of The Chronicle institution returned home considerably "fuller" than when we left Durham.

There were two events to be competed for, with two prizes in each event. In the first the prizes were fountain pens and ties, and in the second event ties and pipes. Friday evening was the conclusion of a three-days Scotch Doubles tournament and it is needless to mention at this juncture that the interest and excitement ran high.

Following is the score:

RESPECTED RESIDENT EXPIRED SUDDENLY

a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Macfarlane, and when a child came to Durham with her parents, where she has resided ever since. Forty-seven years ago she was married to Mr. J. P. Hunter, who, with a family of four daughters and one son survive. The family are Mrs. Charles McKinnon (Jessie), of Bassano, Alberta, who has already left for Durham; Mrs. (Dr.) W. C. Pickering (Mary) of Durham; Mrs. Gordon MacDonald (Grace) of Chatsworth; Miss Effie, at home and Mr. William S. Hunter also residing here.

The late Mrs. Hunter was a woman held in the very highest esteem. In health she was an active worker in church and social circles, and her only regret was that her condition the past several months was such that she could not engage as actively as she would have desired in the work of the Presbyterian church here, of which she was a devoted member.

The funeral which, owing to serious illness in the family, will be held privately, will take place Saturday afternoon from her late residence, interment being made in Durham cemetery. The service will be conducted by her pastor, the Rev. B. D. Armstrong.

Besides her immediate family, Mrs. Hunter is survived by one sister, Mrs. A. H. Jackson, of Durham and two brothers, Robert Macfarlane of town, and George C. Macfarlane of Toronto.

The sudden passing of this esteemed lady is regretted by the whole community, which is a unit in expressing sympathy to the stricken family in their tragic bereavement.

FOOLS OF THE ROAD

List of Menaces Which Could Well Be Eliminated.

The man who insists on cutting in, the young shiek who travels in an open roadster with six or seven other brainless youngsters with him, the poor boob who does his courting in public and drives with one arm around his best girl, the man who insists on racing everybody who tries to pass him and blocks all the traffic—all these and more might be dispensed with on the highways, and their licenses not renewed, thus greatly benefitting the balance, possibly the minority, who honestly seek to obey traffic regulations and to encourage sane driving.

Letter Tells of Wonderful Relief After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Coniston, Ontario.—"After a severe operation and a three weeks' stay in a hospital I returned home so weak that I was unable to move a chair. For four months I was almost frantic with pains and suffering until I thought sure there could not be any help for me. I had very severe pains in my left side and suffered agony every month. One day when I was not able to get up my mother begged me to try your medicine. My husband got me a bottle of Vegetable Compound at once and I took it. I started a second bottle, and to my surprise and joy the pains in my side left me completely and I am able to do all my work without help. I am a farmer's wife, so you see I can't be idle long. In all I have taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, five boxes of the Compound Tablets, two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine, and have also used the Sante-Wash."—Mrs. L. LAJEUNESSE, Box 103, Coniston, Ontario.

The Flip Flapper

"I've never kissed a girl in my life," remarked the painfully proper young man. "Well, don't come buzzing around me," announced the little flapper. "I'm not running a prep school."

ONTARIO Help to Weed Out THE INCOMPETENT MOTOR DRIVERS. By securing your Motor Vehicle Operator's License now. No matter how cautious you are in the handling of your car, the safety of yourself and your passengers is dependent largely on the other drivers on the road. To prevent incompetent persons endangering your family and yourself, each driver in Ontario, not already licensed as a chauffeur, must possess a Motor Vehicle Operator's License. Secure your application form today. You can get it from any garage or issuer of motor car licenses in the Province. The fee for a License is $1. Traffic Patrol Officers may call for the production of Operator's Licenses both on city streets and country highways. If you cannot produce your License you will be subject to a penalty under The Highways Traffic Act. New drivers, and those suffering from physical disability, have the opportunity to pass an examination by Inspectors of the Department. These Inspectors are located at convenient points throughout the Province. Your garage will tell you of the one nearest to you. The examination fee is $1. Ontario Operator's Licenses are recognized in every Province and every State. Wherever Operator's Licenses are required, an Ontario Operator's License is necessary for everyone in charge of an Ontario car. Do not attempt to leave the Province without your Motor Vehicle Operator's License. A satisfactory measure of support by the great majority of motorists has been accorded the Department in its past efforts to maintain the safety of the highways. The higher speed limit and an abnormal increase in traffic now render this additional measure necessary. The Department therefore sincerely hopes you will indicate your support of safe highway travel by securing your Operator's License without delay. Ontario Department of Highways The Hon. GEORGE S. HENRY, Minister
