EXTREME IGNORANCE The preponderous ignorance of some of our American cousins to the South is amusing in the extreme, and not only is it amusing but at the same time lamentable. Last week a citizen and his wife of United States, hearing of Canada as a great tourist country, decided to try it once anyway. They came, they saw and were conquered. While in London, Ontario, the man carelessly tossed a loaded revolver into the back seat as he got out of his car, but his action was noticed by our vigilant Canadian policeman, who promptly arrested him for carrying firearms without a permit. In court he gave out the information that he thought Canada was a place of wild animals and Indians and had brought the revolver along to protect himself and wife from any attacks of these wild marauders. He very humbly told the court that they had been disillusioned and was very much surprised and liked the country quite well and intended to come back again next year. It is a peculiar thing that the average citizen of the United States knows nothing of Canadian history, geography, climate, resources or its people. Having relatives in the U. S. the editor is frank in saying that the fault lies in their educational system. A spinster encountered some boys in the old swimming hole minus everything but nature's garb, and was horrified. Isn't it against the law to bathe without suits on, little boys? "Yes'm," announced freckled Johnny, "but Jimmy's father is a policeman, so you can come in."
