The Road Menace

Motorists now know that whiskey and gasoline do not mix, many magistrates will also have to deal with other offenders. One is the man who persists in using glaring headlights, placing in jeopardy the careful autoist past whom he generally drives at breakneck speed...

Present Day Miracles

Some folks maintain that the day of miracles is past, but we are inclined to doubt it, and here's the reason why. It is now possible to turn darkness into day by simply touching a button. By a simple twist of the wrist water flows from the solid wall. Almost any voice you desire comes to us over the telephone...

One Cure For Crime

The Warden of Kingston Penitentiary some time ago made the significant statement to a body of magistrates visiting the institution: "None of you magistrates has ever sent me a mechanic in all the years since I have had charge here. The 56 men now imprisoned for terms of two years or more are all without a useful trade until we teach them a trade here. They are men who worked at odd jobs, often out of employment, with time on their hands, but none of them had served time learning a trade, and steadily employed. We give them a chance to learn a trade, and help them to decide which trade they are best adapted for."

A Costly Suggestion

The Bradford Expositor thinks that traffic officers are too conspicuous on the road because they use motorcycles. When a driver sees a motorcycle coming he gets his car down to the speed limits and behaves. The officers are accused of sharp tricks at times, but they have to be sharp to catch offenders. The Expositor suggests that the officers should use fast cars so that their presence would not be known. The expenditure for cars fast enough to keep up with a good many on the road now, or to overtake them, would run into a good many thousands of dollars. The motorcycle, as used today, will overhaul almost anything on the road, and it is a much easier affair to manage in a pinch.—Bruce Herald and Times.

Too Many School Holidays

A Bowmanville delegate to the annual meeting of the Whitby-Oshawa-Bowmanville Inter-School Athletic Meet Executive held in Whitby last Thursday, in offering opposition to a proposal that the high schools in the three places should be closed all day for the meet in Oshawa, expressed the opinion that there are too many school holidays, adding that there are a lot of people who think likewise. Looking at the item of expense, he thought that just at the beginning of the school term, when teachers and students are getting down to work, it was too costly a thing to close down three high schools for a whole day for athletic sports when an arrangement could easily be made to hold these on Saturday.

school children of all legitimate holidays. What happens during the school year? The new term begins in September, and during the fall, winter and spring there are holidays for athletic meets, Labor Day, Thanksgiving teachers' convention, two weeks at Christmas, two weeks at Easter, Victoria Day, and so on. The total of all these holidays, exclusive of Sundays, comes to over six weeks, which means when over two months in the summer are taken into consideration, that the school year is little more than eight months.

It does seem, after all, that there are too many school holidays. If there were fewer better results might be obtained.—Whitby Gazette-Chronicle.

How Reds Work The Masses

Enormous mass demonstrations will take place in the Red Square, Moscow, on November 9 to celebrate the tenth anniversary of what is called Russia's "October" Revolution, using the old-style calendar. "The first great triumph of the proletarian," Preparations have been under way for a year, and special funds have been raised to install radio-receivers in remote villages in time to enable all Russia to share the anniversary addresses by Red leaders and the other audible parts of the special programmes.

How the Communists play on the minds of the masses is described in the Century Magazine by Mr. H. V. Kaltenborn, associate editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, who recently visited Russia. "If the Russian people were governed as well as they are propagandized," he says, "the Red engine would stand as a model." The chief function of museums and of libraries is to serve a Communist purpose. All foreign books are separately housed and access is given only to those who have a special permit. Every department of the Government has propaganda films that make the rounds of smaller towns and villages. It was inevitable that the protagonists of world revolution should also use the dramatic stage. Everyone has heard about the Russian Government's effective use of propaganda railway cars carried to every town and village on the line. The universal use of striking posters to visualize doctrines and slogans is likewise familiar, but, says Mr. Kaltenborn, one needs to visit Russia to realize how this passion for transmitting ideas dominates the organization and routine of every social function.

Training for Communist citizenship is the dominant purpose of Russia's school system. Every course of instruction is based, not on its value to the child, but on its value to the Communist State. Classes are carried on in connection with every factory, and each village has special classes for adult peasants. No soldier leaves the Red Army without being able to read and write. Except in mathematics, none of the pre-war school text-books are retained. "Too much church and Czar," was the curt explanation. Less than two per cent of the public school teachers are Communists, but all have passed an examination in "political literacy." In short there is no single Russian institution without its propaganda aspects.

Communism was to bring a new heaven and a new earth. There was to be neither rich nor poor, yet the streets about with beggars and the restaurants are filled with champagne-drinking profiteers. Private trade has been abolished, yet Moscow leads the world's capitals in the number of its street peddlars. "Nowhere has there been a more complete break with the past," says Mr. Kaltenborn, "or a more eager thrust toward the future. Yet nowhere has there been a more complete failure to achieve a set purpose." He adds that Communist leaders already acknowledge that pure Communism failed and that they are now trying a modified form of State Socialism.—Mail and Empire.

Which Was Worse? It was Sunday, a day of infinite peace in the clergyman's household. The family were enjoying a quiet siesta in the library when the maid entered. "Ma'am," she said to the clergyman's wife, "our neighbors, the Brownes, are going out to cut their grass presently and want to borrow our lawn mower."

For a moment the mistress of the house regarded her maid in amazement. "What?" she exclaimed. "Borrow our mower to cut the grass with on the Sabbath day? Tell them, my good girl, we do not possess a lawn mower!"

Face The Music "I would be very glad," said the clergyman, after he had given out the text for his sermon, "if the young man who is standing outside the door would come in and make absolutely certain whether she is here to-night or not. That would be a great deal better than opening the door half an inch or so and thereby exposing the necks of the people in the back row to a current of cold air."

SKIM MILK VS. BEEF-SCRAP FOR WINTER EGG PRODUCTION

(Experimental Farms Note) It is generally acknowledged by poultry-keepers that laying hens require a certain amount of their protein supplied from animal sources. Vegetable protein cannot entirely replace animal protein for egg production. The two most common sources are beef-scrap and skim-milk; the former being a by-product of the abattoir sold on the market and the latter a by-product of whole milk found on most dairy farms.

With the object of comparing the results obtained in winter egg production from the use of skim-milk and beef-scrap as a source of animal protein, an experiment has been conducted at the Dominion Experimental Station, Kapuskasing, Ontario, for the last three years. The average figures over a three-year period show that there is no significant difference in the number of eggs laid, or in the cost per dozen between the two pens. This fact would seem to indicate that farmers who have a supply of skim-milk would not benefit by purchasing other animal feed for their poultry, while other poultry-keepers who may not have a supply of skim-milk may use the beef-scrap to good advantage.

six months each year from November 1, to April 30. One hundred pullets were used. These were divided equally as to size and general development into two pens of 50 birds each. The ration given to each pen was the same, with the exception of the skim-milk and beef-scrap. The scratch ration consisted of two parts each of whole wheat and cracked corn and one part each of whole oats and barley. The dry mash consisted of equal parts of bran, middlings, corn meal, ground oats and barley. The beef-scrap was fed from a hopper and the skim-milk from a drinking-vessel. A supply of each was available to the respective pens at all times. Mineral matter and green feed were also supplied to each lot.

SUIT YOURSELF

The clothes you wear have a great deal to do with the way you feel. If you wear bright clothes, you will feel bright and cheerful. If you wear a somber suit, you will feel somber. If you wear expensive clothes, you will feel prosperous; if you wear a suit of odd design, you will feel peculiar. If you wear glad rags you will feel happy. If you wear a snappy suit, you will feel snappy. If you don't wear any suit you will feel chilly.

Large advertisement for Highway Safety Committee. Title: 'Glaring Headlights'. Subtitle: 'Night Time Terror of the Highways'. Text: 'The motor car with glaring headlights is a danger to its own driver and a terror to others on the highway. Drivers moving in the opposite direction are deprived of sight to guide their cars. A good garage mechanic can focus headlights so that they do not glare. Drivers can do it themselves by following printed instructions. The Department of Highways will mail you without charge complete instructions. Test your headlights often to be assured they do not glare. You are responsible. Lamps are designed for the roadway and not the other driver's eyes or the tree tops. Night driving must be made safe. Never drive with only one headlamp lighted or tail light out. Brakes and steering gear should be kept in perfect condition at all times. Your car must obey if you wish it to be safe for you and not a menace to others. The concentrated effort in behalf of safety on the highways is meeting with a widespread and active support. Co-operation from every motorist is asked so that the example set during this period may take a permanent hold of the consciousness of all who use the highways. It is the duty of everybody to learn how accidents may be prevented. To show that you support this movement put the sticker on your car, "I'm for Care and Courtesy. Are You?" You can get one at any garage or filling station.'
