SEE LILYAN TASHMAN

Comedienne Has Role in "Prince of Headwaiters, With Lewis Stone.

In a role which brought her fame on the stage of Broadway, Lilyan Tashman is featured, with Lewis Stone, Priscilla Bonner and others, in Sam E. Rork's comedy-drama, "The Prince of Headwaiters" coming to the Veteran Star Theatre, Friday and Saturday, February 17 and 18.

Miss Tashman, in private life the wife of Edmund Love of "What Price Glory" fame, has the part of Mae Morin, adventuress and gold-digger.

Back on Broadway, New York Lilyan Tashman is remembered as a gold-digger in the David Belasco stage success, "The Gold-Diggers". Mr. Belasco gave Miss Tashman the part after he had seen her in Zeigfeld's Follies.

"Isn't it curious how success in one role seems to label one forever," commented Miss Tashman. "Because I was a gold-digger in 'The Gold-Diggers' I seem to get nothing but gold-digging parts in pictures. But I don't mind it... it's not everyone who can play the part of a gold-digger."

Around the gold-digger, Mae Morin, and her gigolo, portrayed by the comic John Patrick, much of the humor of "The Prince of Headwaiters" revolves.

John Francis Dillon, who directed "Flaming Youth" starring Colleen Moore, directed "The Prince of Headwaiters."

BILLY DOOLEY PERFORMS WILD ANTICS IN COMEDY

To please the pretty daughter, Molly Malone, he agrees to be hypnotized, and his wild escapades while "under the influence" furnish plenty of laughter.

When Billy Dooley plays he in fireman the audience rocks with laughter. Then there is a clever twist in the comical ending when Billy attempts to make love to Molly. The comedy was directed by William Watson. It was produced by Christie.
