THE DURHAM HOSPITAL

There is nothing like first-hand knowledge when a person wishes to express an opinion of anything, and after a three weeks' experience as the guest of the Durham Red Cross Memorial Hospital we feel that we know a lot more about this institution than could have been gained in any other way. Since its inception The Chronicle has been a consistent booster for this local istitution but in the past our opinions have been derived from information that has been passed out to us by former inmates.

During the past three weeks the "personal touch" has been added, and after our experience we have been forced to the opinion that the Durham Hospital can compare favorably with any other in the country. This has been our third experience with hospitals, and the most pleasant one so far. Speaking generally, hospitals are a place to keep away from; at the same time they are a fine thing to have in your community when you need their services, and in the case of our local hospital we feel more than ever that it is deserving of every call made in its behalf and is one of the town's public institutions that should receive the enthusiastic support of every citizen.

Durham Red Cross Memorial Hospital is a credit not only to the town, but to the whole community; further, it is not saying too much
