

MOTORS AND THEIR CARE

Cure for Squealing Brakes
Brakes squeal when the surfaces become glass smooth. Scrub with a wire brush to remove the ingrained sand, thus avoiding the squealing and making the brakes more effective.

Worth Remembering
A vacuum-operated windshield wiper that slows down when climbing hills can be operated by hand without damaging the device if the inside handle is pushed the way it wants to go instead of against the suction.

Easy Way to Break Springs
Hitting a bad hole with the brakes set is sure to result in broken springs. There is a double strain on the front springs if the wheels strike a hole or similar obstruction.

To Prevent Scoring Cylinders
One way to prevent scoring cylinders, especially when travelling at high speed, is to remove the foot from the accelerator from time to time. The throttle is thus closed, and oil is sucked up past the pistons.

Engine Efficiency
To get maximum power and efficiency from an engine it is absolutely necessary that the proper type spark plug be used. When a plug is too short it does not bring the firing points far enough into the combustion chamber. Good ignition under this condition is impossible. The engine is bound to be sluggish and inefficient. A plug that is too long extends too far into the firing chamber. This will cause the lower end of the plug to become overheated, resulting in igniting the fuel too early. The correct length of plug fits so that the bottom of the spark plug shell is just flush with the inside wall of the cylinder head and the spark gap extends beyond into the combustion chamber.

The Pressure of Tires
Proper inflation is one of the successes of long tire wear. Under-inflation for long periods may cause excessive strain on the cotton cords of the more flexible balloon tire, which often flexes 10,000,000 times in an ordinary tire life. The carcass may break, especially if it meets road obstacles at high speed and the tire is probably ruined beyond repair. Overinflation also has a serious effect on tire wear. Cars so equipped have a tendency to weave on the road, bouncing and absorbing road inequalities with difficulty. A tire overinflated 10 pounds beyond the recommended pressure will wear out after having delivered only half the mileage it would give if properly inflated. Kicking tires to see if they are properly inflated is futile. The only accurate method is to use a tire gauge, and inflation should be checked at least once a week.

Exercise While on Long Tour
When driving over an extended journey the wearing effects can be soothed by getting out and walking around for a while. The nervous tension of constant driving and the necessity of remaining in a sitting position over long periods are particularly trying. The body is constantly generating poisons which are not thrown off by the exercise and deep breathing which produce such invigorating results in brisk walking. Do not partake of a heavy meal immediately after a long drive, when both body and brain are weary. Rest a bit. Relax and invigorate the muscles, clear up the brain, and then it will be possible to start fresh on another part of the tour. Drivers who do not exercise are likely to get an attack of auto-intoxication, with its resultant weariness of body and mind. Persons thus affected often experience a feeling of mental depression and discouragement, and the journey, which should be stimulating, proves merely an addition to the mental and physical strain which they have been endeavoring to escape.

Plenty of distilled water should be supplied to storage batteries in warm weather.

Ruth Raeburn.

Dear Ruth Raeburn:
I have leisure and a limited amount of means and would like to use the spare time in some lucrative way. Can you suggest something new or unique?

Georgie,
A short time ago I read an article entitled "A Word About Aunts" by Evelyn Gill Klahr. It reminded me that there was a day in which aunts had leisure, infinite, beautiful leisure, in which they did many delightful things. They helped mothers when work became too pressing, but most of all they were indispensable to nieces and nephews. They helped them over their snags in fractions, they fixed clothing and added the little extras that made one feel so fashionable, they made candy, had time to read aloud and when rainy days came they helped to make doll's clothing. They had less responsibility than parents and more leisure.

But to-day, the aunts have their own apartments, pay their own rents, have their own professions, have their days booked full of their own affairs, have their own cars and go off here and there and fill their holidays full of pleasure.

They do remember their nieces and nephews with handsome gifts and are extravagant in their professions of affection. But they are not like they used to be and parents miss them.

The more modern we get in our education and culture and habits, it does not mean that all difficulties disappear, and if civilization has a way of making difficulties, it also has a way of solving them. In the multitude of modern professions which attract every available young woman, there is one that may seem curious and that is the profession of being an aunt. It is still in its infancy on this continent, but in London, England, the profession is already making great strides. There in bold letters in the telephone book and directories one reads, "Universal Aunts, Ltd." They have very businesslike offices, stirring with activity, and telephones and typewriters, but their services are peculiarly personal.

Advice on all domestic matters. Children escorted to doctors, dentists. Entertainers provided for all occasions. Girls and boys met, put up for the night and taken to their destination. Letters to lonely people overseas. Universal Aunts undertake any commission at any time. A woman away on a travel tour will cable to the Universal Aunts to have her home opened for her and arrives to find her place in running order.

A bachelor asks them to do his Christmas shopping. A widower wants a suitable place for his motherless children while he is away from home on business. An old lady wants to board her homeward-bound where she knows it will be tenderly cared for.

A mother who is on a tourist excursion wants to visit cathedrals, museums, historical buildings and her boy is so sick and weary of it all and wants to go fishing. A professional aunt is called upon and she makes the way open that the desire of the boy's heart can be gratified.

I do not see why, Georgie, you could not make this profession both interesting and profitable, at some of the fashionable summer resorts in Ontario throughout the summer.

In the winter if you reside in the city or in a large town, I feel sure you could make your services most useful to mothers who desire to attend social functions and have no one with whom the children can be left in safety.

In almost all new undertakings spare grease when looking for some in an emergency.

When forced to push another car out of the way with the car, see to it first that the obstructing car is not in gear and that the brakes are not applied.

The most recent photograph of Prince Henry, the Duke of Gloucester, who will accompany the Prince of Wales on a trip in the autumn to British Africa.

now needs appear and I haven't the least doubt a little originality and adaptability as well as an honest desire to please, will make the profession of an aunt a lucrative and enjoyable occupation.

Next week I will discuss another line of work for your benefit.

FAN MAIL DOES NOT MAKE THIS ACTOR PUT ON THE RITZ

Tarzan Receives Bushels of Fan Mail Daily and Has Not Asked For a Raise in Salary Yet.

In many instances, a film player's popularity is gauged by the number of fan letters he receives. While this is not an infallible rule, it does serve to get a certain standard and at times regulates a player's salary. However, this is not always true, but in this particular case it was carried out in style although the player in question was not interested in whether he received the added stipend or given greater parts.

This player is Tarzan, Ken Maynard's wonder horse, who has appeared in all of Ken's pictures to date, and in his latest "The Upland Rider" at the Veterans' Star Theatre Friday and Saturday, June 8 and 9, the horse is featured.

Tarzan, long noted for his tricks and almost human intelligence, began to receive fan mail along with the first picture he appeared in, until now it averages between seventy-five and a hundred letters a day requesting his photograph. Many of these letters ask that Tarzan be given more to do and Charles R. Rogers, the Producer of the Maynard series for First National, heeded the demand of the public and has made just such a picture in "The Upland Rider". Here Tarzan received his "chance" and proceeded to show them what he could do. This picture really places Tarzan in the featured role and, next to Ken, he has more to do in the picture than any other player.

HAMILTON CAST IN NEW ROLE IN LATEST COMEDY

Lloyd Hamilton will be seen as an electrician's helper in his latest Educational - Hamilton Comedy, "Somebody's Fault", which will be on the bill at the Veterans' Star Theatre Friday and Saturday, June 8 and 9, in addition to the longer picture.

As the clumsy and untrained assistant, the big comedian gets many chances to register some very funny comedy in this picture, according to advance reports.

Estelle Bradley will be seen as his leading lady, with Bob Kortman and Al Thompson in the principal Male supporting roles.

QUEEN STREET A. O. T. S.

The regular monthly meeting of the A. O. T. S. class of Queen Street Sunday school was held in the basement of the church last Thursday evening. There was a splendid attendance. The president, Mrs. Padfield, had charge of the devotional exercises were Miss Lottie Mervyn, Miss Violet Snell, and Mr. W. Glass, the secretary, and Mrs. McCrae, read the minutes of the previous meeting. At the conclusion of the business part a fine programme was given. The musical numbers were, a solo by Mr. Benson, duet by Messrs. Roy Wiggin and William Moore, a quartet by Miss Emily Smith, Mrs. Farrell, Mr. Benson, and Mr. Padfield. Mr. Irvine Sharp took the life and works of Tennyson. Miss Mary Metcalfe read one of Tennyson's poems, "St. Agnes' Eve" and Mrs. Slack recited very effectively "Crossing the Bar". At the close of the programme Mrs. Hutton, the bride of the hour, was presented with an electric iron and serving tray, Miss Mamie Storey reading the address and Miss Ethel Hewitt making the presentation. Mrs. Hutton has the honor of being a charter member of the class and the first bride from its members. A programme of games was very much enjoyed after which refreshments were served. All thought that a pleasant and profitable evening had been spent.

ABERDEEN INSTITUTE

The Aberdeen branch of the women's Institute held their annual meeting on May 22 at the home of Mrs. J. Caswell, with an attendance of 31. After the usual part of the meeting, the election of officers for the coming year took place as follows: President, Miss C. Fletcher; 1st Vice-President, Mrs. J. Grier; 2nd Vice-President, Mrs. H. Hopkins; Secretary, Mrs. Fred Cuff; Treasurer, Mrs. J. F. McLean; Directors, Mrs. Dan McLean, Mrs. H. Hopkins and Mrs. J. S. Davey. The ladies then had much pleasure hearing a very interesting speech by Mrs. Hayes, a Government speaker of Georgetown. She spoke on the aims and activities of the Women's Institute. A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Hayes. The National Anthem closed the meeting.

Sheep-killing Dogs Pursued

Two hounds and a spaniel, owned by Southampton residents, apparently found things too quiet in town and, craving excitement, canines started out on a rampage, destruction, visiting several flocks of sheep in Saugeen Township, disastrous results. The dogs, owned by Alexander McCannell, ex-ward of Bruce County, who chased them to Southampton and discovered the owners, who will be asked to reimburse the owners of the sheep that were worried by the dogs. Rescued from Reservoir

On Saturday evening, Howard the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Leslie Walker, while playing over an underground reservoir for the barn, pulled the covers off and fell in. A little while after he ran to the house and gave the alarm. Fortunately the water was not any deeper, for when the mother got there he was in deep enough that by holding his head back in his struggles, could just keep his mouth out of the water. She managed to rescue him safe and after passing a very restful night, the little fellow is none the worse for his cold dip.—Teessaw News.

Pioneer Mother Passed Away

Another of the good old pioneer mothers passed away on May 26 in the person of Mrs. John Robertson of this town in her 72nd year. The maiden name of deceased was Agnes Jessie Cromar, and she was born near Chatsworth, she was united in marriage by Rev. M. Little of Dornoch to Mr. Robertson and lived for 16 years on the 13 concession Bentinck, 14 years on 2nd concession Elderslie and 2 years in Chesley. There were but to them a family of two daughter, Jessie, who became the wife of Russel Fiddis of 12th concession and who passed away 4 years ago. Mary, Mrs. Lewis Mustard Strathaven, in Holland Township Grey County. Mrs. Robertson has been ill for five months. Deceased had been a staunch member of the Presbyterian Church since her childhood days and in the absence through the illness of her pastor the funeral service on Tuesday was taken by Rev. A. H. Wilson of Salem assisted by Rev. N. H. Bell of Chesley. All that is most of a good wife and mother is not lying in Chesley cemetery.—Chesley Enterprise.

Cars Collided

Two cars, driven by Miss Isabel Klein and Mr. Joseph Reinhart collided at the junction of Jackson and Yonge streets about 8.47 o'clock last Saturday evening. Miss Klein proceeding in a southern direction on Jackson, was under the impression, from the action of his car that Mr. Reinhart, approaching her intended to turn into Yonge street. It was a most unfortunate accident. The large McLaughlin sedan was quite badly damaged, and a wheel was torn from the Ford which Mr. Reinhart was operating. Both automobiles were being driven at moderate rates of speed.—Walkerton Telescope.

Improvements at Cemetery

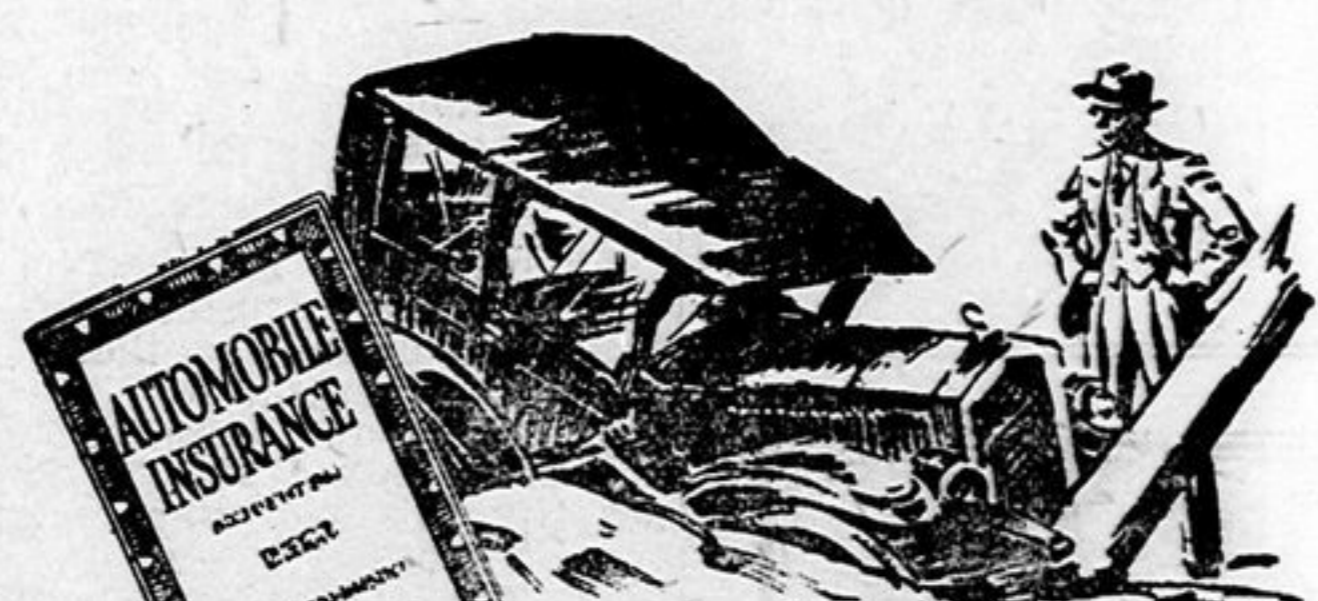

Carleton R. K. Sutton is making extensive improvements at the Walkerton cemetery. In order to facilitate the moving of the graves, all plots are being lowered or raised to a uniform level, and an appearance of order is being brought out of chaos by the removal of the conglomeration of trees and shrubs on the private plots. When the work is complete Walkerton's burial grounds will present a much more attractive appearance. The improvement is being made under authority of a by-law passed by the town council and although in some cases Mr. Sutton meets objection in most instances plot owners realize that the removal of the trees, hedges, shrubs and antiquated enclosures, will add greatly to the appearance of the grounds.—Walkerton Telescope.

Auto and Steer Collide

Last Saturday morning, as August Wilke of the Howick at Garrick township, was driving a number of fat cattle to market, Clifford, he was met by a motorist travelling at a brisk rate of speed. It is alleged that the motorist did not slacken up speed until the car came right up to the cattle, which one steer suddenly turned in front of the animal was carried some distance by the force of the impact, and had its leg fractured. This rendered it unfit to ship, and it had to be disposed of to the Clifford butcher. Mr. Wilke intended to take action to compel the motorist to re-imburse him for his loss. Midway Gazette.

Bad Fire at Gorrie

A disastrous fire took place at Gorrie last Friday night, when the frame hotel building, owned and occupied by Mr. Justin Steinmiller formerly of Otter Creek, became ignited, through some unknown origin. The fire was discovered about one o'clock, and it spread rapidly, and the large frame stack and the dancing pavilion near were also consumed. The windows in the bank and post-office across the street were broken by the heat of the flames, and it was with considerable difficulty that the buildings were saved. We understand that Mr. Steinmiller has $3000 insurance on the building.

It only takes one wreck. INSURE!
