NEPTUNE IN MODERN GARB VIEWS QUEBEC

Now that Shakespearean productions are staged in plus fours, evening clothes and khaki there does not appear to be any solid objection against Father Neptune discarding his traditional garb of seaweed in favor of seaboots and sailor togs, and the Canadian National Railways photographer and Ops gracefully lounging in Quebec City as depicted above. It will be noted that the old gentleman retains trident and helm but has adopted a modern steering wheel in place of horse and dolphin. This particular effigy may be found on Mountain Hill and appears to replace one which up to 1850 had place of honor over the entrance to the "Old Neptune Inn" then a noted coffee house in St. Peter Street, frequented by seafaring men. Time was when carved wooden figures frequently marked hostelrys and commercial establishments in Quebec and Montreal but only a scant few have withstood the advancing years.

We Just Made a Farmer of Jim

Four brave, brawny boys—and our fond foolish hearts Beat high in their joy and their pride; Four treasures immortal entrusted to us To rear, to guard, and to guide. It was ours to fathom the gifts of each mind, To study the depths of each heart, And discern, if we might, the labor of life That Dame Nature designed for their part.

We pondered it long, but 'twas settled at last That our Henry a preacher should be, And our John, you should see, for a lawyer was born. And Joseph should make an M. D. But the fourth was so quiet and queer in a way That 'twas hard to decide about him And we need his help, so we said "Well just make a farmer of Jim." So the three went forth from the farmyard gate In the kingdom of books to toil, To delve in scholastic lore, while Jim— He delved in the farm's rich soil. 'Twas a goodly sum we had gathered by For use in the hour of need; 'Twas the savings slow of the frugal years But 'twas spent with a reckless speed. 'Twas a goodly sum—like the wind it went And the three never knew how we planned. How we worked and scrimped, and struggled and saved, To furnish their large demand; And Jim—how he toiled through the ceaseless round, Till each wearisome day was done; Undaunted he by the scathing storm Or the noontide's scorching sun. But it was from the pages of Nature's book, From the blossom, the bird, and the sea From the mountain and the surging That he learned of the deeper meaning of life, Learned its scheme and scope sublime And in realms that brood in solitude Learned the needs of the soul divine. Unfettered by rule of measure or school His mind looked up from the sod. And his thoughts grew broad as the universe And deep as the things of God. And the people came and besought our Jim Of his knowledge to impart, And he taught with the simple eloquence That thrills the human heart. And they bowed them down to this son of toil, And they cried that the nation's need Was his steady brain and noble heart And his honor in word and deed. And they came from near and they came from far

Ready with an Answer

Pat was hired in a lumber office. The proprietor was a young man and he decided to have some fun with the new hand, so Pat was left in charge of the office, with instructions to take all orders which might come in. Going to a nearby store, the proprietor called up the office: "Hello! Is this the East Side Lumber Company?" "Yes, Sirr." "Send me up a thousand knot holes." "What's that?" "One thousand knot holes." "Well, now, an' ain't that a shame! We are just out of them. Sold them all to the brewery." "To the brewery? What do they want with them?" "They use them for bungholes in barrels."

Rather Mixed

On returning home from church, a Shelburne little girl demanded, "Mamma, who is Sim?" "What do you mean," said the mother, "I don't know any Sim." "Yes you do," said the little one, "you singed about him at church. All the people singed, 'Praise Sim.'" Further questioning led to the conclusion that the Doxology had led to the misunderstanding. This story reminds us of the one about the little boy who had been to church for the first time, and the next Sunday asked to be taken to church again. When pressed for a reason, he said he wanted to hear them sing about the cross-eyed pretty him at sea until someone remembered that one of the choral numbers had contained the words, "The consecrated cross I'd bear."—Shelburne Economist.

To Laura Secord's Cow

I've often wondered what became of you, who walked your way to fame. Did you walk back? If so, and how We'd never think that of a cow. I've often pondered o'er your fate, But now I have upon my pluck A piece of meat I cannot chew. I think, O Cow, it must be you! It will pay you to advertise in The Chronicle.

FAMOUS LAST WORDS

"I wonder if it's loaded!" "Step on the accelerator and we'll try to get across before the train comes." They say these things can't possibly explode no matter how much you throw them around. "I guess this rope will hold my weight." Let's go out beyond the life line. "These traffic cops can't stop me." "What a funny noise that snake makes." "Which one of these is the third rail, anyway?" "That fire cracker must have gone out, 'I'll light it again." "What's wrong with you? You can't see the scenery unless you lean out." "It smells like gas, but I guess it is all right. Lend me a match." "I took some medicine in the dark and I must have got hold of the wrong thing." "I'm not afraid to walk on the track." "Let's change places and I'll paddle." Good at Figures Kind old gent: "How old are you, my little man?" Small boy (tersely): "Eight." "And what are you going to be?" "Nine."
