Mrs. Terence Tully, widow of the noted Canadian aviator who was lost during the attempted London to London flight of the plane, Sir John Carling, will get a life pension. This is voluntarily provided by the directors of the Carling Brewing company, who have set aside a trust fund of $40,000. Mrs. Tully will get three-fifths of the income from the fund and Mrs. James V. Metcalf, widow of the other unfortunate aviator, will get the remaining two fifths. Mrs. Metcalf is now living in England.

AN INTERESTING CHRISTENING

The Shallow Lake Correspondent of the Owen Sound Sun-Times has the following to say of a well-known Durham family in last Saturday's issue: "The home of Mr. and Mrs. James Hillis, was the scene of the christening of a grandson, Kenneth McCallum, of Durham. The ceremony was unique in that it was performed by Rev. W. J. Paton, a former pastor of the Erstwhile Presbyterian church here, who performed the marriage ceremony for the parents, Dan McCallum and Pearl Hillis, and later, baptized their first-born son, Clyde, and now the second child, a son. Besides the grandparents and other relatives, a number of neighbors and friends were also present and a very appetizing supper concluded the happy occasion. Rev. Paton is now stationed at Redvers, Alberta, and every summer, with his wife and family spend their vacation with friends here while at their cottage at Sauble Beach. Before returning to the west they will visit his parental home at Greemore, and other relatives in these parts. Mr. and Mrs. Dan McCallum are now residents of Durham."

THE OLD RED SCHOOL HOUSE

On a playground rough and rocky Where the cedars thickly grow, I can see an old red school house As it stood there years ago.

Up the long and dusty highway, Past the smithy on the hill, Came the sound of children's voices I can almost hear them still.

Many seasons have departed Many hours have flown away, Since the woods rang with the laughter Of those boys and girls at play.

Strangers now our places filling Other voices laugh and cry, Others climb the hills and fences That were ours in days gone by.

Fleeting years have swiftly, surely, Cast their shadows o'er each brow, Scattered as the leaves of Autumn, Where are all those schoolmates now?

Do they sit beneath the maples As of old their legends tell? Do they climb the beach trees yonder Listening for the old school bell?

Never more in that old schoolroom "Neath the teacher's watchful gaze Shall the same old playmates gather As they did in olden days.

Far and near their homes are scattered, And though other lands are fair, Surely memory often wanders To that old red schoolhouse there.

There's a thought forever tender Clinging in my memory still— For the comrades of my childhood And the school house on the hill.

A soft answer turneth away wrath, but it takes the hard cash to turn away the installment collector.

An Empress

The Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of Australia" in Southampton Roads. From a height of two thousand feet the giant liner looks like a toy boat although her registered tonnage is 21,850 gross and she is one of the largest liners to come up the St. Lawrence River.

NEWSPAPER DEATHS

According to a recent compilation of figures, dealing with the newspaper mortality rate in Canada, no less than 252 weekly and 51 daily publications have suspended during the past ten years. The increasing cost of newsprint and the expenditure involved in the effort to keep abreast of the times, by the modern machinery are said to be chiefly responsible for their disappearance. Amalgamations taking place in many towns and cities have likewise been a potent factor. The majority of Canadian towns and most cities now support one newspaper, which maintains an independent stand politically and is well patronized by the business men of its locality.
