SOWING RED CLOVER FOR SEED

(Experimental Farms Note) During the last few years an experiment has been conducted at the Cap Rouge, Quebec, Experimental Station, to compare the seeding of red clover by broadcast with seeding it in rows.

The average results of five years show that for every 100 pounds of seed produced when sown broadcast and the first crop was cut for hay, there were 102 when sown in drills twenty-four inches apart, 123 when sown in drills twelve inches apart, and 127 when sown broadcast and the first crop cut for seed.

As the main point, however, is the greatest profit, it is interesting to note that the acre value of the products were respectively $62.86 when sown broadcast and the first crop was cut for hay, $55.00 when sown broadcast and the first crop was cut for seed, $51.18 when sown in drills twelve inches apart, and $43.60 when sown in drills twenty-four inches apart.

According to this experiment, the most profitable way would be to sow broadcast and cut the first crop for hay. However, for a district like that around Cap Rouge where the season is short, it should be remembered that the first cutting should be made around the middle of June, for if it is delayed until the clover reaches full bloom, it will generally not allow time for a second crop to afterwards properly mature.
