THE STORY OF "GRANDMA'S BOY"

Only in his own dreams of an ideal for himself was grandma's boy brave. In reality he was meek, modest and retiring, never having done anything bolder than sing out loud in church. Even Granny had more courage, for when Harold shrank away from the snarl of a big tramp sitting in their garden, Granny went after him with the broom, and you should have seen that big fellow run! Timidly Harold dared love the Girl, for whose affections he had a rival in a Bully, whose best fun was in tormenting Harold. Mildred gives a party for her two beaux, and Harold has to go in an ancient suit of grandpa's, smelling of moth balls. His other only suit had given the lie to its guarantee not to shrink when the Bully had toppled him into the well. In the midst of the party's gaiety, which, however, was torture for the Boy, the sheriff comes with word that a tramp has robbed a jewelry store and killed a man. Every man is given a badge and a gun and the posse sets forth to get the only desperado who had ever terrorized Blossom Bend. Harold is scared by the countless shadows and noises of the dark night and runs home a pitiful coward. He spends the night behind his barricaded door, buried in his bed covers. Granny is torn with pity for her Boy, and the next morning gives him a Magic Charm that she claims made a great war hero of granddad. With a faith in Zuni, the charm, that he had never had in himself, Harold went forth. When the posse refused to follow his daring lead, he captured the bad man single handed— captured him and lost him, only to get him again and see him finally landed in the village gaol. Being brave is a great thrill to Harold, so while, in his courageous mood he seeks out the Bully and gives him well deserved fistic punishment. Then Grandma, dancing for very joy, shows him that Zuni is only her umbrella handle and not a charm—that he had within himself real heroism. To prove it, Harold throws the charm away before proposing to Mildred. "Grandma's Boy" comes to the Star Theatre for three days' showing commencing next Monday (Armistice Day) and, coupled with "The Dog Show", one of Charlie Chaplin's best comedies, will be without exception the best full-night all-comedy performances imaginable. The popular prices of 25 cents and 35 cents should assure capacity houses at all showings.

Electric Bulb Caused Fire.

Smoke issuing from windows in large clouds greeted the fire brigade when they arrived at the residence of Mr. J. Buckingham in response to an alarm sent in on Tuesday morning about six o'clock. Rushing upstairs the firemen found the mattress and bedclothing of a bed in flames. The thick smoke necessitated the donning of gas masks, but with the use of chemicals the flames were quickly extinguished and the smouldering remains of the mattress thrown out the window to the ground where water from a small hose put an end to all traces of the fire. The cause of the fire was an electric light fixture becoming loose and dropping on the bed, the heat of the bulb causing the bedclothing to become ignited. It was not until the smoke began backing down stairs that Mr. Buckingham became aware of the fire and sent in the alarm.—Collingwood Bulletin.

A Sagacious Dog

The other day a well known town dog called "Doc" endeavored to attract his mistress's attention while at her sewing, by restlessly going in and out the upstairs room where she sat. "What's the matter, Doc?" she enquired, "Do you want a bone?" Up went his ears and his tail wagged in joyful anticipation. "Well," she continued, "we can only get that at the butcher's and I have no money!" "Doc" walked out and away downstairs and was forgotten. After a short while he returned with the household purse in his mouth, and rubbing his nose on the lady's skirt to attract her attention, he looked up proudly as much as to say, "Now won't you get it for me?" "Doc" is a Belgian police dog. This is no hatched up story but an actual fact.—Dundalk Herald.

Convicted on Two-year Theft

Two years ago a box of tools was being taken by James Hudson from Toronto to his garage in Orangeville when the tools fell off his truck and disappeared. Provincial Constable Owens has been working on the case for some time, with the result that James Garrity, Verne Jones and George Jiggs, of Caledon township appeared before Magistrate Crawford Friday and pleaded guilty to the theft of the tools. The box was valued at $206, and of this amount $160 worth is still missing. The men were fined $10 and costs each and given suspended sentence for one year. They have to make restitution for the amount still missing and will have to pay into court $70.50 each. If the money is not paid within one week they will spend sixty days in jail.—Orangeville Sun.

After Listowel Player

The Hamilton hockey club was in communication with Frank Kemp this week endeavoring to have him sign with the Hamilton Canpro team. While Frank has speed to burn and can deliver the goods, his weight is somewhat excessive for a hockey forward. This, together with his business interests here, will likely keep him out of the big company.—Listowel Standard.

A Red-Shelled Egg

Can any one of our neighboring towns show a red-shelled egg? A few days ago Mr. Cranston Brubacher brought an egg in from the farm of Mrs. Martin Brubacher who lives about two miles east of Hawkesville. It was laid by a barred rock and was perfectly normal in appearance except that it was brick-red in color. An inspection showed that the shell underneath was the usual whitish color and an expert opinion is that the contents of the egg would be rather watery. The unique specimen of hen fruit was on view for several days in the window of the Elmira Signet and attracted much attention.—Elmira Signet.

The Owen Sound Railway

Again we hear rumors of a railway from Meaford to Owen Sound. Of course this is pleasant pastime when there is nothing much to talk about. Will some person explain what benefit a railway to Owen Sound would be to Meaford? At the present time we have an excellent truck service which no railway could benefit and passengers can now go to Owen Sound while they would be waiting at a railway Station.—Meaford Express.

Weather Prophet Hurt

J. B. Bowes, the Chatsworth weather prophet, was hurt in a motor accident Saturday night, and will be confined to Owen Sound Hospital for at least a week. He is badly cut about the head and otherwise bruised, according to the Owen Sound Sun-Times.

It Was a Wildcat

Percy Spencely, of Route 3, Brantford, formerly of Melancthon, had an interesting experience one evening lately when coming in from plowing. A large animal up in an apple tree attracted his attention. He got his dog and then threw stones in the tree to get the animal down, but it jumped from the top of the tree and away with the dog and Percy after it. It took to a big elm tree and Mrs. Spencely phoned Lou Galley to bring his gun. The gun did the trick and brought the animal down, but the surprise of the men can be imagined when they found it was a wild-cat as big as a dog. The Spencely children had been playing in the field many times and picking up apples.—Shelburne Free Press and Economist.
