Editorial Difficulties

The Enterprise is late this week due to the holiday and to other conditions over which we hold no control. The flu epidemic seems to have at last hit this town and at present two members of the Enterprise staff are off duty, leaving the sporting editor and the foreman to carry on together. Frank Murphy, the linotype operator, was the first to take one on the chin from Mr. Flu and not content with scoring a one-round victory over Frank, the same gent dropped back on Wednesday night and knocked the senior editor groggy.-Chesley Enterprise.

Grey Wolf Shot Near Chesley

Venison must be getting scarce up in New Ontario when wolves came as far south as Sullivan to get good pickings. On Christmas Day Pete Alpaugh Dobbinton's famous trapper and hunter, and Oscar Legge, a local crack shot, who should be on the Bisley team, got word there was a wolf not far from town and so with Pete's faithful dog they hunted nearly all day but the sly animal could not be rounded up. On Wednesday morning with their rifles and hound, Pete and Oscar started out again after Mr. Wolf. Every time the dog got near the wolf it would turn and show fight and the dog wouldn't come to close quarters with the wolf's fangs which did not look very inviting. Finally, on the farm of Fred Malinofski, about four miles east of Chesley, Oscar got a good view of the wolf and, drawing an extra fine bead, struck the animal with the first bullet in the head. As long as he saw the tail wagging, Oscar one killed yesterday.-Cheslay Enter-

FELL LIKE LUCIFER, BUT CLIMBED BACK

Eugene C. Schmitz, who died the other day in San Francisco is an exemplification of the comforting thought that however deep a man may fall into the pit of disgrace, he feasance of office. A technicality alone saved him from a penitentiary term. His adviser and patron, Abe Mr. Charles Brown is blossoming Reuf, did go to prison as he deserved, and when Schmitz escaped there were many who said a grave miscarriage of justice had taken place. But Schmitz nival of graft that his regime let loose upon the city. At first, nobody believed him. Then a few did, and gradually, many more. He kept his head up and the time came when the people of San Francisco were proud to elect him to other positions of public trust. Their confidence was never abused, and it is said that he was mourned by a million people. Nearly As Bad as Tweed

The story of the Reuf-Schmitz looting of San Francisco has been often told, and even in these days when things are done on a much grander would produce a righteous shudder. They did not have quite the opportunities of Boss Tweed, but they and their followers undoubtedly looted the public treasury of millions. In 1906, when an earthquake razed the city Hall, it was found that the presumably massive pillars of marble had been stuffed with sawdust. Nobody could do business without paying graft and this applied to many reputable as well as to all disreputable businesses. It has always been contended that the administration of the city was good that is to say, it was efficient, but everybody began to note that everything was costing a little more. In other words, the immediate victims of the grafting gang were passing along such of their losses as they could to the general public. It was a newspaper editor, Freemont Older, if we are not mistaken, who brought the rascals to book. He began to criticize some of the more obvious forms of graft, and the boys selling papers were run off the street. seemed as though Reuf could stop a newspaper from publishing. Older was a fighter, and he enlisted a rich man to employ private detectives to make a thorough investigation. The subsequent revelations ruined Reuf and Schmitz.

David didn't kill Goliath, Moses did not write the Pentateuch, a whale didn't swallow Jonah.
