MRS. MARGARET SPROULE Mrs. Margaret Sproule, an esteemed resident of this vicinity for practically her whole life, passed away last Thursday night at the home of her daughter. Mrs. Roy Lawrence, Bruce street, in her 65th year. Mrs. Sproule had been a sufferer for the past several years from Bright's disease and in the early winter was confined to her bed for two months. She apparently regained her old health and was feeling considerably improved until two weeks before her death when she was again taken seriously ill, confined to her bed, and from the first little or no hope held out for her recovery. Mrs. Sproule was a daughter of Mrs. Whitmore of Durham, and the late John Whitmore. She was born in Egremont Township and with the exception of two years at Owen Sound and a year in the West at Watrous, Sask., had lived the whole of her life in Durham and vicinity. Thirty years ago she was married to the late Mr. Joseph Sproule of Glenelg, and for a number of years they farmed in that township in the vicinity of Markdale. They came to Durham in December of 1912 and Mr. Sproule passed away in July of the next year. RUINS CHAMPIONSHIP ASPIRATIONS

Johnny Risko, the Cleveland baker boy, is credited with spoiling more potential champions than any other living heavyweight, but never gets anywhere himself. He upset Paul Berlenbach, Jack Delaney, George Godfrey and Jack Sharkey, but just when he was being touted as the best heavy in the game Maxie Schmeling gave him a terrific beating. Then right afterwards Johnny defeated Von Porat, who himself had beaten Tom Heeney. Can you figure it out?
