OTHER PAPERS' OPINIONS

We Must Teach Safety

In this industrial age many people are amazed at the number of accidents that occur to workmen. It may be surprising, but 75 per cent. of accidents in industry must be taken care of by educational means. It is said that industrial men, especially foremen, are poor teachers in this line. If such is the case would it not be proper thing for industry to have teachers, real teachers, in their plants for this purpose alone? This is only a suggestion but accident prevention certainly means a great deal to the country at large. There is no definite program of teaching safety first principles in our schools. What little is taught is only done so in a haphazard manner. It is surely time that the educationalists awoke to the fact that many of the frills and fancies of education should be dropped and some worth while instructions fill their place. Education is not moving forward with the world today.—Kincardine Review-Reporter.

Extravagance of Town Councils?

If there is a temptation because the tax rate has been advanced a mill to hop on the council and cry extravagance, might the suggestion be offered to hesitate and indulge in serious thinking. By the citizens, it may be taken for granted, that were not this step absolutely necessary it would not have been recommended by chairman C. T. Stephens of the Finance Committee. Expenditures, the greater part of which are fixed, not by the council but by the vote of the ratepayers, through the endorsement of various by-laws, have to be met. To do this the only recourse is upon the rateable property. Economy is a sound theory, indeed a sane practice, but when the liabilities are incurred it is but honest and fair to endeavor to meet them. This, the council of 1929, as have past councils, is endeavoring to do. To have no leftovers is the desire and in this it is believed the citizens will concur.—Collingwood Bulletin.

The Sell-Out

Everybody hates a Judas. Let a man be what he will; let him be the darkest kind of villain he can accomplish and still he will attract at least the admiration of his kind; but a Judas, never. The Judas is despised of earth and heaven, and hell itself is quick to cast him out.

The thought was very well illustrated recently by Wortman, cartoonist in the New York World. Under his caption of "Metropolitan Movies" the artist depicted two figures. One was a football coach, a regular human gorilla showing his teeth in the most approved Rooseveltian fashion and demanding of a meek little Moses of an athlete standing before him, "Smokin', eh? You're a fine athlete." And the retort: "But coach, it's the brand the advertisements say you recommend." There is a touch of humor in the cartoon, but beneath it all there is subtle irony. Who of us has not inwardly squirmed at the thought of our movie heroes and heroines endorsing everything under the sun, including cigarettes. And has anybody ever gone and deliberately purchased a particular brand of cigarette because some football coach or movie star has endorsed that brand?

Some way we cannot escape the conclusion that the public personage who endorses a cigarette or other merchandise for pay—and if not for pay, why do it?—that such a person has sold something of themselves and something they could not afford to have sold. We instinctively feel that such commercialism of quality which they possessed to attain eminence, and that the dross only remains with the finer qualities sold to be ruthlessly plastered on the inside and outside of every magazine cover and on every street car and subway car in the world.—Walkerton Herald and Times.

PUNISHMENT TO FIT THE CRIME

A French milkman, who was recently caught selling adulterated milk was surprised to hear from the presiding magistrate the punishment meted such an offence in the original statute, enacted under Louis XI. (1491). It provided that anyone who sold watered milk should have a funnel put into his own throat and his own milk should be poured down it until a doctor certified that he could not swallow any more. Sellers of stale eggs were to be put in the pillory, and their eggs given to children, who would be encouraged to pelt the wrongdoers with their own unsavory wares. "Those who sold adulterated butter were to stand in the pillory with the butter on their heads until the sun had melted it all! If there was no sun, they were to be fastened up in front of the fireplace in the goal to undergo the same indignity. Spectators might abuse them as much as they pleased, so long as they did not offend against the Almighty or the king."

ILLITERATE SWEDS FOUND

A sensation was created in the Swedish press a short time ago by the discovery of a farmer in the province of Sodermanland who can neither read nor write Swedish. The unlucky fellow was "found out" when he reported to the authorities for military service and was put through the routine intelligence examination.

This is the first case of illiteracy among the younger people reported in many years, and no one is able to explain how he escaped the vigilance of school authorities.

Because of the compulsory education act which makes every one attend school up to the age of fourteen and the very small immigration from other countries Sweden has almost no illiteracy at the present time. What few illiterates there are are to be found among the aged people in remote country districts.

The official Swedish Government statistics, which rank among the most accurate and comprehensive in the world fail to give any figures regarding illiteracy, presumably because there is none.

TEN SURE METHODS TO PROMOTE SAFETY

The following "ten safety commandments" were issued recently by the Allied Automobile Owners' Association of Brooklyn as a start to its association campaign:

1. If you see a ball rolling along the highway, stop your car. There is a child behind the ball.
2. The most dangerous part of an automobile is the "nut" that holds the steering wheel. Give that serious thought.
3. Make sure your brakes hold. It will avoid aches for all parties.
4. Slow up when reaching intersections.
5. Don't break traffic laws. Violators in Brooklyn paid approximately $500,000 in fines last year; some went to jail.
6. Very serious offences are passing to the left of a trolley and violating the eight-foot law. Adhere to these rules and save a life.
7. When intoxicated or sleepy don't drive your auto. The best thing to do is to adhere to the Eighteenth amendment when operating a vehicle.
8. Don't drive with one hand when you can use two. Leave spooning for the parlor.
9. Trying to beat out another driver will save you only a few seconds. It isn't worth while; you may find yourself up a tree. Don't hog the road.
10. Be careful and watch the road. This will keep pedestrians out of hospitals.

CHURCHES

KNOX Y. W. A.

The Knox Young Women's Auxiliary held a Crokinole Social in the school-room of the church on Monday evening, June 3rd. An enjoyable evening was spent playing crokinole. Mrs. Bert Barber was high among the ladies and five men tied for first place. Messrs. Bert Barber, Stanley Ledingham, Peter Ledingham, George McKechnie and John Hamilton, the last mentioned winning in the play-off. A short program consisting of a reading by Mrs. Sparling was given. Refreshments were served. Over $10.00 was realized.

QUEEN STREET CHURCH

A. O. T. S. CLASS
 The A. O. T. S. class held their regular monthly meeting in the basement of the church Thursday evening, May 30. It was a missionary meeting and Miss Fraser, being the convener of that committee, took charge of the program.

A piano trio was given by Florence MacDonald, Eunice Moon and Florence Bailey.

The Class was very pleased to have Rev. and Mrs. Armstrong with them at this meeting. Mr. Armstrong gave a very interesting talk on China, telling of the strange superstitions of these people, as well as many other things of interest. Mrs. Armstrong then showed and explained to the Class a number of articles which they had brought with them from China. This work done by the Chinese people is very beautiful, and the collection which Mrs. Armstrong has is well worth seeing.

Two musical numbers followed: a quartette consisting of Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Knechtel, Mr. Glass and Mr. McCrae, and a duet by Clara McCrae and Emily Smith.

After a hearty vote of thanks was tendered on behalf of the Class to Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong, who so kindly favored us, the meeting was closed by singing a hymn and Mr. Fiddes pronouncing the Benediction.

 Mrs. Philip Oehm recently visited at Mr. Adam Felck's.

Mrs. Thompson, Cleveland, recently spent several days with her cousin, Miss Elizabeth Henry.

We extend our sympathy to Mr. Patrick Horrigan and family in their recent sad bereavement in the death of a loving wife and mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Mutch, Yeovil, spent Sunday at Mr. Claude Witherow's.

Mr. Donald Nelson spent Sunday with Mrs. William Nelson.

Last Wednesday afternoon when Mr. Alfred Ammerman was returning from Mount Forest in his carriage he was struck by a car, which badly damaged his vehicle and caused the horses to run away. We understand Mr. Ammerman was not severely injured which was very fortunate as an accident like that might easily prove fatal.

Mr. and Mrs. William Adamson and son Kitchener were recent visitors at Mr. John Henry's Sr.

Mr. John Leibold, Mrs. Christena Leibold and Miss Justina accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Fatum, Aytton, spent the week-end in Preston.

Misses Marjorie Schenk and Etta Shiel, Mount Forest, spent the week-end at their homes here.

Great excitement prevailed for a short time Monday at noon, when it was seen that Mr. John Leibold's house was on fire. The fire, which started during the absence of the family is a mystery as to the cause. It had gained considerable headway before being discovered and in a short time more it would have been beyond control. Considerable damage was done to the interior of the house.

Card of Thanks

Mr. and Mrs. William I. Hewitt and Ethel and Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Livingston wish to extend their thanks to friends and neighbors for the kindness and sympathy shown them in their sad bereavement by the death of their dear one.
