OTHER PAPERS' OPINIONS

Make It a "Stop" Watch
It is customary in most counties to make a presentation to the retiring warden at the end of the year. The gifts are usually signet rings or canes or other more or less useless keepsakes, but Ontario County Councillors presented their warden with a wrist watch. Maybe it would be a good idea to present such a gift to the warden at the beginning of the year. It might be a gentle hint to start the sessions on time.—Fergus News-Record.

Why Do They Do It
Down at Montreal one recent Friday morning, Executioner Ellis "swung off" two boys who shot a man while they were engaged in robbing his cash-box. Those boys were brothers and neither of them had reached his 20th birthday. The total amount that they got by the holdup did not amount to as much as they could have earned if they liked work, in two weeks of manual exercise. Yet, those boys dangled at the rope's end simply because they wanted to get something, as they foolishly thought, for nothing. In this case, as in thousands of others, lives that might have been of immense benefit to society have dropped through the scaffold trap.

Just why is it that boys go wrong? How does it come that nearly all the holdup shootings are done by fellows between the ages of 15 and 28? Many explanations have been made, but it appears to us that the correct one is yet to come. Old criminals who have spent years in prison are unanimous in their decision that a criminal career does not and never did pay. It is a logical conclusion that you can get no more out of life than you put into it. Then why do boys go wrong? Is society partly to blame? Our method of dealing with criminals is crude and savage and has changed very little in a century. If a murderer is caught we go through a court trial, which very often is merely a farce, and then we pay some debased creature a couple of hundred dollars to take him out and kill him. There were 16 of those necktie parties in Canada this year. A big reward is awaiting the genius who will find a cure for crime.

"What Makes Canadians Canadian"
Every time an American comes to Canada to live, his first determination seems to be to try and make this country Yankee. Every time an Englishman comes to Canada to live, he wants to make this country English. The resisting of these two opposing impulses is a good thing for this country, because it is what makes Canada Canadian. Canadian personality is welded out of the clash between English influences and American influences. Canadians are able to realize that the American is going too fast. His rational, scientific action, his business philosophy of make or break, and his restless business ambition tend to make a business machine which has created an astounding prosperity in United States. But these things made Americans happier? Have they added to the richness and fullness of American life? Are the American standards of success based on true and lasting premises?

The Englishman, on the other hand, is going too slow. His industrial philosophy is archaic. Maintaining a vast army of middlemen, he lets the workman do what the machine should be doing. He devotes his time to political philosophy and economic theories rather than to practical action. He is the source of big world talk and big political talk.

But the Englishman has a cultural setting and an aesthetic background that the American, as a class, lacks. Canada cannot afford to adopt either English or American methods in their entirety. She must pick the best of each and apply them to her own peculiar problems and conditions. The sooner Americans and Englishmen in Canada realize this fact, the sooner they realize that this is CANADA, the sooner will they become Canadians and make the going easier for themselves.

Meantime, the pressure from both sides is forming and building up a distinctive Canadian personality. And that personality is an engaging and a hopeful one. Johnny Canuck is sitting here with 3,729,665 square miles, including some of the most productive soil in the world; sitting here with vast resources, with minerals, including 95 per cent of the pre-Cambrian shield, containing the great ore deposits of the world; sitting here with a variety of climate unequalled in any other country on earth.

His vigorous Nordic temperament gives him the energy to develop his possibilities. His historic background gives him cultural appreciations. His achievements and his blood give him a pride and a determination, as he sits here on his fortune, not to be led by the nose this way or that, but to make a distinct and powerful personality for himself and for his country, CANADA.—Vancouver Sun.

Splashing in It
"You must not look around at anyone, son," said the mother to her boy in the restaurant. "Perhaps that poor man has never learned to eat his soup right."
"I was just looking to see if he had fallen in."

MARKET MILK IMPROVED

Market milk has been greatly improved in quality within recent years. For some time the Health Departments of most large cities have been applying scientific tests in order to protect the consumer from dirty, bad, contaminated or adulterated milk. Milk dealers themselves are also making use of these tests to protect the consumer, the dealer and the careful producer alike. By systematic testing and grading of incoming raw milk supplies, the dealer is now able to eliminate milk unsuitable for bottling and thus to improve the quality of milk offered to the consumer.

To supply information to producers and handlers of milk the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa has issued a bulletin on the Testing of Producer's Milk for quality. This bulletin, No. 123 of the Department of Agriculture, by C. K. Johns, and A. G. Lochhead, Bacteriologists at the Experimental Farm, treats the subject from the standpoint of food value, cleanliness, keeping quality, healthfulness and flavour.

It explains the importance of each of these factors in a food so generally used as milk and tells how the tests for each are made. From knowledge of the quality of milk obtained from these tests, dealers are able to grade milk, and to pay for it according to its value. Any system of grading, to do justice, it is stated, must take into account local conditions such as present quality of milk supply, relative shortage and surplus at different seasons and competition at other outlets for milk. All these considerations should be taken into account if the maximum satisfaction is to be given to all parties concerned.

The Gateway of C. P. R. Connections to New York

THE OLD LOG-COTTAGE SCHOOL

The old log-cottage schoolhouse, John, I think I see it yet. Just but a step from two cross-roads Where you and I met me; The same board fence encircles round; The bell—well, we had none— But how we guesd' the time, dear John By looking at the sun.

What anxious boys we went to school To learn to read and write, Fill'd with the loftiest notions then, And futures just as bright; How proud we sat upon the bench And plumd' each word at will, And smiling round—why, John, I think We're in the old school still.

BRITAIN'S SPEED KINGS DISPERSED

In consequence of the British Air Ministry's decision to leave future contests for the Schneider Trophy to private enterprise, the British High-Speed Flight has been dispersed. Two of the team only are remaining as a nucleus to carry out high-speed research and possibly give assistance in future Schneider Trophy competitions. They are: Squadron Leader A. H. Orlebar (right), who attained the world's greatest speed of 367.7 miles an hour, and Flight Lieut. G. H. Stainforth (centre). Flying Officer R. L. E. Atcherley (bottom centre), both of whom beat the world's record speed over 100 kilometres as recently as September 7 last, the former flying 336.7 miles an hour, and the latter 331.6, have returned to normal flying duties with squadrons. Flight Lieut. L. O'Grady (left) who twelve months ago set what was then the highest speed ever reached by man, 319.67 miles an hour, is being posted to Iraq for squadron duties.
