Dear Uncle Joe and Aunt Bell.--We are delighted to be here with you this evening and to rejoice with you on this happy occasion, though we find it hard to realize that you are both kept so youthful in appearance and manner. Even outside the family circle you are affectionately known as "Uncle Joe" and "Aunt Bell", and we all know that the "Welcome" sign is hanging on your door for us and we all like to visit with you.

We would ask you to accept this purse and these flowers as a token of our good wishes for the best of health and many more years of wedded happiness, and we'll meet here again with you on your Diamond Jubilee. "Lang may your lum reek."

Signed on behalf of your well-wishers.--Charles Moffat, Kathleen Firth.

McWilliams (Our Own Correspondent) The rapid growth has received a setback by a few nights of heavy frost but if followed by warm weather and showers the growth should yet grow merrily on. We have seen the growth so far advanced at this time of year and if frost has not done too much damage there is a bright prospect for hay, grain, fruit, etc.

Messrs. Seeley, Seeley & White of Woodstock visited Mr. H. Eckhardt since we last wrote and purchased a car load of cattle while here.

Mr. Will Jacques and nephew, Clarence Ingram of Stratford were out this way on Victoria day and popped a few plump ground hogs which we did not care to feed longer. We think they deserve a bounty for riding us of these destructive pests.

Mr. Reggie Arnett spent Victoria day at his home here.

Sheep shearing is now the order but wool has dropped so low in price it is hardly worth the trouble and still when we go to purchase woolen goods they boast that they are all wool and demand the high price.

Mr. Farr Lawrence purchased a truck load of feeding calves down country which sold like hot cakes to surrounding farmers.

Follow the Birds Mother (at 7 o'clock in the evening): "Come, Ethel, it is bedtime. All the little birds have gone to sleep in their little nests."

Ethel (at 5 o'clock next morning): "Come, Mamma, it is time to get up. All the little birds are up, and the mamma birds, too."

"Don't you want your office furnishing insured against theft?" "Yes, all except the clock. Everybody watches that."

Durham Masons Attended Church

Attended Service in a Body Last Sunday Evening When Rev. B. D. Armstrong Preached Excellent Sermon That Was Much Appreciated by Local Order.

Durham Masons to the number of about 50, with whom were several members from outside lodges, marched in a body to the Presbyterian church last Sunday evening when the pastor, the Rev. B. D. Armstrong, who is also the chaplain of the Durham lodge, preached an excellent sermon from the text from I Kings vii:22: "And upon the top of the pillars was lily-work; so was the work of the pillars finished."

Among the most striking architectural features of Solomon's Temple were two grand stately pillars which were deemed so important that a name was given to each of them. Attention is called especially to the adornment of these pillars. The builders took pride in making their work both strong and beautiful. Rough, unadorned blocks of stone might have carried the weight of the temple, but those who wrought a work of love carved upon the columns a stately garland of lily-work.

Our thoughts are centred around two thoughts, strength and beauty. Every one possesses an innate sense of what is beautiful. It is one of the ultimate things in human psychology. We must distinguish between the beautiful and the ornamental. Ornament may be only added ugliness if it hides inferior workmanship or material. We recognize that beauty is something more than is called forth by immediate need. In things material and spiritual beauty is the offspring of love.

"God is love" and in His temple every pillar has its lily-work. The world may be regarded as a temple built by His hand according to His plan. We see in it everywhere strength and solidity, which are the master-builders' first principle.

"The world is established that it cannot be moved."

"He hath founded it upon the seas and established it upon the floods."

We see also in the work of God's loving hand that lustre of perfection which is beauty. A world of beauty is spread out around us. God means that we should appreciate it.

There was a gate called Beautiful to the temple of old. There is a gate beautiful to every man's soul. If it may enter in and worship the Lord.

So we pass to the temple of the spiritual, where also there are the pillars and the lily work. Here also God has ordained that there shall be strength and beauty.

The gospel lays the foundation of spiritual life deep and strong in faith, clear and decided as to the great convictions which are the basis of his life. He must be strong in conscience, loyal to his duties and obligations. In God's strength this may be accomplished in us and even more; on the top of the pillars there shall be lily-work.

We learn to distinguish between what is merely right and what is beautiful. We learn to go beyond the limits of mere justice and to appreciate and practice generosity and self sacrifice.

The spontaneity of love is beautiful, to have to be prompted to do a kind act takes from it much of its beauty. The humility of love is most beautiful. If we take credit for our own goodness it begins at once to lose its beauty. We admire the unconscious heroism and self sacrifice like a man like Paul. Such beauty of character draws the hearts of men. The one thing that is beyond all conception strong and beautiful is the love of Christ, pure, spontaneous, infinite and devoted.

To look to Him and follow Him, to live like Him lives of self sacrifice, that is our task. If we aim at that we shall be pillars in His temple.

Beauty of character is the product and manifestation of inward grace. However the outward discipline of life has no small part in evoking and directing the growth of the soul both in strength and beauty. The pillar and its lily work is only an emblem of this process. After the pillar is set up there remains the slow difficult process of carving. So also in God's temple, all our lives the Divine artist will be carving lily work upon us. All through life we see the scaffolding and the tools, signs that the architect is still building. He never makes a false stroke. He strikes neither too hard nor too lightly for the material. He has to work upon and the pattern He desires to bring out so that always strength may be perfected in beauty.

For all of us the question of life in its strength and beauty is a question of taking up the cross and following Christ. May we like men accept that challenge!

On returning to the lodge room the brethren moved votes of thanks to Mr. Armstrong, the managers of the church and the choir for the opportunity given to worship with them.

PRETTY GIRL LEAPS INTO LEADING ROLE

Gillan Dean Forgotten After Screen Test Until Discovered by Popular Comedian.

Gillan Dean, who takes the leading feminine role in "Honeymoon Abroad" a World Wide Picture which will be shown at the Star Theatre on Friday and Saturday considers herself the luckiest girl in England. She was born at Oxford and a short time ago, at the age of seventeen, visited the Ektone studios just outside of London. Her beauty and grace led one of the officials to suggest that she take a screen test.

This she did and was placed in some mob scenes to get her used to the camera and the studio atmosphere. Then in the hustle and bustle of studio life she was forgotten. She continued to play in mob scenes, however, and was ever given small parts.

Monty Banks, the American comedian was on the lot one day preparatory to taking the star role in "Honeymoon Abroad". He saw Miss Dean on a set and immediately pointed her out to Tim Whelan, who was to direct the picture.

"There's just the girl for the leading feminine role," he said. Whelan called her to one side and informed her that he was going to take a screen test of her.

"I have no objections," she smiled at him. "But you already have one in your vaults."

The forgotten screen test was dug up and Miss Dean was immediately assigned the part in the picture playing opposite Monty Banks. Her work in this picture was so excellent that she was immediately given a contract by the British International Pictures to play regularly.

"Honeymoon Abroad" is the story of a couple of honeymooners who are chapered by the bride's mother. There is a merry mix-up of brides and bedrooms and jealous husbands outside of the mother-in-law episodes.

CAN'T SUPPLY DEMAND

With orders booked over 100,000 chicks hatched under the Hatchery approval policy of the Dominion Department of Agriculture in approved hatcheries in Quebec, it looks now as though it will be almost impossible to supply the demand which has come from the new Quebec Poultry Club scheme to develop more efficient egg production.

The federal and provincial departments of agriculture are co-operating in the scheme. The surprising feature of the project is the extent to which young women on farms in the Eastern Townships and in the area adjacent to Quebec City have entered as poultry club members.
