There are different implements on the markets for crushing lumps on a field that is being cultivated, but in Lambton County a home-made one was seen that did the trick. It was a red oak stick of timber about 10 feet long Court of Revision for general business. With harrow teeth and railroad spikes driven in the bottom. A frame was mortised into the timber by which it was drawn. This stick of timber breaks up the lumps and firms the ground. It is especially useful in preparing the seedbed where the ground is lumpy.
