Miss Florence McDonald, daughter of Reeve D. J. and Mrs. McDonald, had a rather unique and unpleasant experience while in Hanover on Monday afternoon. She was the unfortunate victim of a poisonous insect of an unknown species, which lit on her neck while she was standing on the street, stinging her on a vein which produced very rapid and startling results. In a few moments the poison had penetrated through her entire system, causing much swelling, rash and pain. She was quickly taken to a doctor, who checked her distress with a hypodermic. Had she not been in quick access to a doctor the result would no doubt have been quite more serious. At time of writing she is almost recovered.

Knox Corners

(Our Own Correspondent)

Our pastor spoke on Sunday on the subject "The anguish of the light" and gave a good message, though many of the congregation were absent. We need not think that even after we have received the full light and life of the gospel in our souls, that our journey here on earth will be all sunshine. The Master was a man of sorrows, and whom God loves He chastens. We may wander far, but if we return again in sincere repentance He will pardon and receive us again. God is ever speaking to us. Let us hear His voice and follow His leading lest our ears become dull of hearing and He turns away to call us no more.
