Foiled

Recently a bashful young professional bachelor at Wainwright picked up an article made of black elastic on the street which looked too small for a belt and entirely too large for a sleeve holder, and announced that the owner could have same providing they could show him what use was made of the same. The next Sunday morning a handsome young lady called at his office and asked for the article. The bashful young man blushed deeply, but stepped into his private office and gingerly took from a bookcase where he had placed it, and reappeared in the reception room and handed it to the young lady. She thanked him, slipped the web over her Bible and proceeded on her way to Sunday School.—Viking News.

BROWN BEAR APPEARS IN HUNTER'S GARAGE

With Her Two Cubs, She Comes to Open For Food Scraps

A party of hunters who had motored to their hunting cabin north of Coehill to inspect it for the fall outing, returned home to report that as they drove their automobile up to the cabin a large brown bear appeared in the garage door and demonstrated she was ready for a fight.

The hunters remained quiet, and the bear returned to the garage. In a few minutes she came out with her two young cubs. Then the party opened up the cabin, but when they were at dinner they were surprised to see the old bear looking in the open window and sniffing at the cooking. She made no further attempt to bother the party, however. The supper over, all scraps were thrown out, and mammy bear cleaned up on the food.

Two days were spent at the cabin and before the owners left, Mrs. Bear and family would come to the open door for bits of food.

THANKSGIVING

By Mollie Bevan, in The Blue Bell

Lord, I was bred in city ways, I cannot fitly give Thee praise For harvest plenty as thy yield Who plow and plant and tend a field.

Let others hymn the fruitful land I know that Thou wilt understand The grateful heart that humbly brings Its litany of lovely things.

Great books to read, great folk to greet, Youth, strength and health and daily meat; The lure of roads, the urge to roam, At journey's end a roof called "Home"; Earth's wondrous ways; sunrise and setting; The heart's remembering and forgetting The lilt of song, and laughter kind, Sleep's benediction; peace of mind. And than all these is one thing more—I have my friends to thank Thee for!

A paint manufacturer recently received the following letter: "Gentlemen: Will you please send us some of your striped paint? We want just enough for one barber pole." A Sunday school teacher was telling her class about the missionaries who went out to foreign lands to convert the cannibals. "What do you think is the first thing the missionaries should teach the cannibals?" asked the teacher. "I know" said one bright little fellow. "They should teach them to be vegetarians."

Must Have Been

It is said an American tourist drove into town, and, having heard of Fergus and its reputation for money making, stopped and asked a local boy if this was Fergus.

The boy replied he would tell him for a nickel. To which the tourist responded: "Never mind, this must be Fergus." —Fergus News-Record.
