Relics of the late Queen's funeral are already in request, it seems. In a curiosity shop not ten miles from London a crape veil is exhibited, bearing the following quaint legend :-"This veil was worn by the wife of a Privy Councillor on the occasion of her late Majesty's funeral in St George's Chapel, Windsor. To be sold for charity." It is pleasant to have so rare an opportunity of gratifying at once our loyalty and our charity, our respect for the great; and we are glad, says the Daily Chronicle, that wife. the wife of a Privy Councillor does not show the same selfish affection for her mourning as the small boy did when they tried to remove the crape band from his coat. " Has the Queen | Hochberger, M.D., Imperial and Royal come alive again?" he demanded. "No," was the inevitable answer. "Then I'll keep it on till she does," he replied with the clinching logic of five years old.

It is just about a hundred years vice. ago since Malta became a British possession. And Malta is worth having, not only as a coaling station, but as a really pleasant place. At this time of the year the climate, at some periods somewhat relaxing, is at its best, and everything from the entrance to the harbour, among the grandest in the world, to the journey ashore, is a "dysa," and a visit to the lace shops, most of the lace they contain being imported from France, is delightful. As everybody knows, the Knights of Malta found a refuge here early in the sixteenth century, and have left not a few traces of their residence on the islands. The palace of the Governor, which comprises a fine museum, was formerly the palace of the Grand Master of the Order, and the magnificent church at St. John, which, with its twelve aisle chapels and monuments, and mosaics is worth a long journey to see, was built before 1580.

Fruitless Attempts to Get His Remed Tried - War Office to Too Bound Up With Red Tape to Use It.

The terrible ravages caused by enteric among our troops in South Africa would dispose the War Office authorities, one might suppose, to, at all events, give a fair trial to any alleged remedy, backed by medical authority.

The tale told by Dr.Gordon Bennett, of Halifax, N.S., upsets that theory. Dr. Bennett, who is now in London, declares that he has for many months past vainly urged the War Office authorities to try his fever cure, which has proved eminently successful, he asserts in Halifax and Chicago.

"In the early part of last year," Gagnon, he had at last found the said Dr. Bennett to a representative sovereign remedy for all Kidney Comof the London Express, "seeing that the British troops in South Africa were dying like rotten sheep of enteric, I wrote to the War Office that I had discovered a cure which I was grand medicine, and I shall always willing to present to the British Government.

"I wanted no money, but said that if there were any honours I would be happy to take them.

"To this letter I received no reply, I then wrote to Lord Salisbury, and received from him a reply by return, regretting that my letter had not been noticed by the War Office, and The Mightlest Empire the World stating that it would be. At the same time I received a letter from the War Office to this effect, 'Letter received; contents noted.

No man has ever reigned over an Empire so vast as King Edward's. His Majesty rules over one continent 100 peninsulas, 500 promontories, 1,000 lakes 2,000 rivers, and 10,000 islands. Queen Victoria ascended the throne of miles; she handed it down to King Edward with 3,000,000 miles added to "On my son's return I wrote to the it! them at £225,000,065.

The Union Jack has unfolded itself, so to speak, over two acres of new territory every time the clock has ticked since 1800. Edward VII. rules over an Empire fifty-three times as big as Germany, three and a half times as big as the United States, and three times as big as Europe. He has three times as many subjects as the Czar, and he reigns over more territory in America than the President of the United States.
