RESTRAIN YOUTHFUL IMPULSES.

The boy is father of the man is an old adage, and it has long since become recognized as a fact that the early part of a boy's life forms the foundation upon which the superstructure of manhood is to be erected.

THE MEANEST THING OUT.

The mean, stingy man is about the poorest product of the divine architect ever turned out of his workshop.

A few evenings ago a farmer from one of the adjoining townships was down about the station when he heard a number of shots in the direction of the lumber piles at the Furniture Factory, a little to the north of him. He could see nobody and paid very little attention to the shooting till he heard a bullet whiz by only a few feet from his head, when he thought it was time to make tracks for safer quarters.

A farmer named Smith, hired a boy to help him around the farm during the summer. One morning he told the boy to go and salt the calf.
