BONE FOOD

Soft and crooked bones mean bad feeding. Call the disease rickets if you want to. The growing child must eat the right food for growth. Bones must have bone food, blood must have blood food and so on through the list.

Scott's Emulsion is the right treatment for soft bones in children. Little doses every day give the stiffness and shape that healthy bones should have.

Bow legs become straighter, loose joints grow stronger and firmness comes to the soft heads.

Wrong food caused the trouble. Right food will cure it. In thousands of cases Scott's Emulsion has proven to be the right food for soft bones in childhood.

Selection of the Breeding Sow.

Since the pork packers are in closest touch with the British consumers they are the most competent judges of the class of hogs required for the most profitable trade; and we find that they recommend the use of Yorkshires and Tamworths as especially suitable for the production of bacon hogs, while Berkshires of the newest type are also excellent. The other breeds are not, as yet, so well adapted; but, as it has been already stated the breeders of these breeds are rapidly bringing their pigs into line and sows of these kinds when crossed with males of the more approved bacon type, produce good bacon pigs. These cross-bred pigs frequently makes more economical gains than the pure-breds. The Yorkshire-Berkshire and Tamworth-Berkshire cross is especially popular.

No breed of combination of breeds has a monopoly of all the desirable qualities in a pig. There are good and bad in all breeds, and bad and worse in some. It does not follow that because a hog is of any given breeding he is necessarily a good or a bad bacon hog. It is necessary, therefore, that the breeder of market hogs have a clear-cut conception of the ideal pig; then he will be in a position to make the best use of the materials at his disposal by judicious selection and careful breeding.

It is commonly believed among breeders of live stock, that if sire and dam be equally well bred, the former has the greater influence on the conformation and the latter on the nervous temperament and feeding qualities of the progeny. Whether this be true or not, care should be taken in selecting the females for the herd to choose only those of a quiet, contented temperament. Few things are more exasperating than a roving, noisy, discontented sow; not only is she a continual menace to fences and gates, but she is cross at farrowing time, and is quiet as likely as not to destroy half of her litter in some fit of nervous excitement. In addition to this, a sow of this description is seldom or never a good milker, and every stockman knows that the profit or loss on a batch of pigs is determined largely by the start they get in life during the first six or eight weeks. The milking qualities of the sow is a matter too, often overlooked or ignored when selecting the female for a breeding herd. Many men seem to take it for granted that if they can get a sow to produce a large litter, she will, as a matter of course, nourish them afterwards. This is a grave mistake. Sows vary in their milking propensities as widely as the cows in an unselected herd. Among pigs the ability to give a large flow of milk, is more a family trait than a breed characteristic; that is to say, different families of the same breed differ more in this particular, than do the different breeds, each considered as a whole. It is, therefore, largely a matter of selection. A well formed udder is, of course, essential. There should not be fewer than twelve, better fourteen, well developed, evenly placed teats, extending well up to the fore-legs. The sow should be large and roomy, with great length and depth of sides; she must, however, be trim and neat in her outlines.

showing no tendency to bagginess or flabbiness, and, though rot wild or nervous she must be active in her movements. A heavy listless, clumsy walk should not be tolerated in breeding stock of either sex; it indicates a lack of vital force; and an animal with this characteristic is not likely to be so prepotent as one with a more active, sprightly temperament.

The brood sows should be selected from prolific families. A sow must raise a given number of pigs each year to pay expenses, and each additional pig represents a profit. There is, however, a limit to the number of pigs each year to pay fitable litter; very large litters are apt to be weak and uneven in quality. Few sows can properly nurse more than fourteen pigs, and an even litter of from eight to twelve large, strong, lusty fellows is much more profitable than a litter of sixteen or eighteen weak, flabby, and ill-nourished pigs.

Yours very truly,
W. A. CLEMONS,
Publication Clerk.

Rheumatism is a Constitutional Disease

The pain and localized conditions are mere results of constitutional conditions. Poisoned blood sends its evil influence to various parts of the body, and to cure permanently you must treat it constitutionally. Nothing so completely dispels these poisons from the system as Ferruzone. It makes new blood. It imparts vitality and vigor, enabling the system to throw off the poisons that engender rheumatism. Ferruzone also fortifies the system against the weakening effects of rheumatism, and cures, not simply relieves as most medicines do. Sold by all Druggists.

A shoemaker, who lived in a large town, often boasted that he was afraid of nothing. Two young men thought they would test him, so one pretended to be dead, and the other induced the cobbler to sit up all night with the supposed corpse. As he was in a hurry about some work, he took his tools with him and began working. Soon forgetting that he was in the presence of death, he began to sing a lively tune, keeping time with his hammer. During the "wee sma' hours the corpse raised himself up and said in a sepulchral voice, "When a man is in the presence of death he should not sing." The shoemaker, nothing daunted, rose from his seat and went to the bedside, strap in hand, and dealt the corpse a stunning blow on the side of the head saying at the same time, "When a man is dead he should not speak." It was the last time they tried to scare the shoemaker.
