THE BRIDGE IS A NEW ONE

And the Company is Anxious to Make It Hot for the Fellow Who Says It Isn't.

Stratford, Oct. 14th. 1903.

N. MCINTYRE, Esq.,
Durham, Ont.

DEAR SIR.—Yesterday morning we telegraphed Mr. Vollet to arrange with someone to unload the car of bridge material for us, and were very much surprised to receive the following message: "Am instructed to say will not touch bridge, rumored it is second hand."

Such an expression on the strength of mere rumor is beyond our comprehension, and we are prepared to forfeit the price of the bridge if it is second hand. The material was imported from the U. S. by us and worked up in our shop and paid for by us. Can we put it any stronger?

Our object in asking the clerk to arrange for the unloading of the bridge was simply because it was impossible for us to send our men up at once to do so.

With reference to the bridge itself, in order to give your town an extra strong bridge we voluntarily increased the size of some of the different members, for instance, the top cover plate from 3" to 5 1/2" thick, the main diagonals from 3" to 4", the main chord bars in the middle panels from 6" to 7" thick, the steel joists from 6" to 7" deep, difference in weight alone on joists of 2 1/2 lbs. to the ft. or 28000 lbs. costing us at least $100.00 more than our plan calls for. For doing this we are told that it is rumored that our bridge is second hand.

We are very much annoyed that such aspersions should be cast at us, and cannot understand the reasons the party had for making the assertion and would be very pleased if you would kindly furnish us with the name of the party and we will give him every opportunity to prove his words. It is a matter that we cannot allow to be put on one side. Our name for honest and fair dealing is at stake, and we value it more than money.

Trusting that you will be able to furnish us with the desired information, we remain

Yours faithfully,

Flesherton.

An event of interest was reported from Toronto last week concerning two esteemed young people from here who were joined in the bonds of matrimony. The two thus united were Mr. D. J. Jamieson, eldest son of Mr. David Jamieson, 3rd line Artemesia, and Miss Katie Whitten, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Whitten, this place. The young couple purpose making their home in the city and may prosper as attend them.

On Friday evening last the Methodist church choir and a number of their friends were entertained at the home of Mrs. R. B. Joy, at a party given in honor of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Fawcett, who leave this week for their new home in Toronto where Mr. Fawcett has secured a school. Mr. N. C. Mansell, of Glen Meyer Norfolk Co. has been engaged to succeed Mr. Fawcett in the principalship of the public school here.

Councillor R. Best and sons, who recently purchased the Wurts threshing outfit, have supplanted the horse power with a fine new steam engine delivered to them last week.

Dr. Chistoe has sold to Mrs. Thompson and daughter Mary that part of his property on Collingwood Street which has been occupied by Mrs. Thompson for years as a residence and bakery.

Mr. Edward Whitten lost a valuable cow on Saturday last, choked with an apple.

Fifteen or perhaps more went from here to hear Mr. R. R. Gamey, M. P. P. at Fever-sham on Thursday last and as far as we have heard "the man from Manitoulin" was highly pleasing in his eloquently delivered address.

Mr. F. Nickolson occupied the Baptist pulpit here on Sabbath morning last.

Mr. Wm. Smith has again resigned the position of caretaker of the Methodist church and tenders are being asked for some one to take his place.

The terrible rain storm on Wednesday evening of last week caused a postponement of the fowl supper prepared by the Presbyterian congregation at Eugenia, On Friday evening the feast was held and the neat sum of $43.00 was realized.

Dr. Ottavell was at Durham on Saturday last.

Mrs. Cheeseman and Mrs. Carr of Barrie, were the guests of Mrs. (Dr.) Carter last week.

Mrs. N. Cornfield, of Toronto, is visiting her sister-in-law Mrs. Joseph Cornfield here and other relatives in this vicinity.

Charlie Ottewell arrived home from Woodstock on Saturday to spend a week with his parents here.

Mr. J. P. Bunt left last week to take a situation with the Knechtel Furniture Co. at Hanover.

Miss Ella Barnhouse was home from Owen Sound High School for a holiday from Wednesday last till Monday.

Miss Stella Loucks, Milliner at Hill & Co. Markdale, was home over Sunday.

Miss Hattie Wallace eldest daughter of Jas. Wallace, of Eugenia, who has been the past year at Winnipeg is visiting her relatives in this place and vicinity.

Mr. Geo. Mitchell was called to New Lowell on Sunday last to see his brother who has been ill for some time and is not expected to recover.

Rev. L. W. and Mrs. Thom are on a visit among Mr. Thom's old friends at Arthur this week.

Miss Maud Richardson, returned to Toronto on Saturday to resume her art studies.

Mr. Ben Wilson returned last week from Port Arthur where he spent the summer.

Mr. J. W. Handerson returned to Toronto after a lengthy visit here.

Alive, Yet Half Dead;

Feeling miserable. This is the condition of thousands of growing girls and women. Can't eat enough to be truly alive. Digest so little of what they do eat, as to scarcely know what life really means. Miserable? Of course. Eat more, digest more, then feel streaming through life's renewed current, the buoyancy, the strength, the hopefulness of youth. Simply done if you'll just use Ferrozone, the wonderful food maker, nerve strength and brain vigor. Your Druggist, knows all about it. Call and ask him about it.

Cattle for the North-West.

Mr. F. W. Hudson, Dominion Live Stock Commissioner, says that at present the trade in stockers between the older provinces and the North West Territories is in a very unsatisfactory condition and many of those who have been shipping young cattle to the North West this season have been very much disappointed in the prices realized.

Under the date of September 22nd, Mr. Chas. W. Peterson, Secretary of the Territorial Live Stock Association writes—"With in the past week from four hundred to six hundred stockers have reached Calgary alone, and the demand here is absolutely nil. These people must either take their stock elsewhere or lose heavily."

There are several reasons for this condition of affairs. Finished cattle have been selling at unprecedentedly low prices. It is stated on good authority that the entire out-put of one of the largest ranches in Southern Alberta was sold at $32.50 per head for three year old and four year old cattle. Naturally therefore, men that paid $22.00 per head for yearlings two years ago and have sold them this season as three year olds for prices in the neighborhood of $32.00, are not anxious to buy stockers this fall at anything like the prices prevailing for the last two or three years.

Again, winter feed is scarcer than usual on the ranches this fall; and as a consequence many of the cattlemen that usually purchase a number of stockers at this season of the year have scarcely hay enough to carry their breeding stock through the winter.

Another reason for the present unsatisfactory condition of the Stocker trade, not only in the North West but also in the older Provinces, is the poor quality of a large number of the young cattle that have been placed on the market during the last few years. Many of these were as far from the right kind of raw material from which to make finished beef as they well could be. During a period of high prices, markets are not so discriminating in the quality of the goods offered, but when prices are low markets are more sensitive; they are more easily overstocked; buyers are more careful in making their selections, and it becomes a case of the survival of the fittest only. A high class produce of any kind will always command a fair price; but on a depressed market inferior stuff must be sacrificed at prices far below the cost of production.

The ranchers have also discovered that they must be more careful in the selection of their bulls than heretofore, and Ontario breeders will do well to make a note of this. During recent years every bull-calf that was eligible for registration was saved with a view of selling him at some sort of a price for the ranches; but the ranchers have discovered that they must pay more attention to the quality and breeding, and that first-class bulls are cheaper at a good price than registered scrubs as a gift. It is safe to predict that in a very short time it will not be possible to sell inferior bulls to the ranchers at any price.

Brain-Food Nonsense.

Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. They have dispelled the silly notion that one kind of food is needed for brain, another for muscles, and still another for bones. A correct diet will not only nourish a particular part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be, its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepare for their appearance or prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. A few doses aids digestion, stimulates the liver to healthy action, purifies the blood, and makes you feel buoyant and vigorous. You can get this reliable remedy at Darling's Drug Store, tf.

THE HOME AND SCHOOL.

How They Help or Hinder each Other.

A Paper forming the opening address of President Jas. H. Coleridge at the Convention of South Grey Teachers held in Durham, October 1 and 2, 1903.

The best part of Education is that which money cannot purchase. It is found in the first school first teacher, and in the home, provided the home which a child attends, home, provided the home which a teacher attends, but for one cause—death. It has no holidays, and Sunday is meant for its best day of all.

The intellectual and fundamental, destined to outlast life itself; they relate to the body, mind and soul. The poor have the same opportunities as the rich in this school. All may catch the spirit of self-help in this school. Here that "cannot be gotten for gold." The character of manhood and womanhood is determined here. Society, the church, the State, and the progress of this first school of life. It antedates and underlies all other organisms, is the oldest human society, the mother and nurse of the church, the foundation upon which the State is built, and the teacher and model of government.

There ought to be complete harmony between home and school, and therefore mutual helpfulness. One should directly promote the interests of the other. Necessarily they must influence each other. Their interaction ought to be beneficial to both, and it would be if both were conducted according to the divine plan. Instead of this, however, home furnishes bad boys to disturb and destroy the highest function of school; and the latter often hinders the work it is placed to do. The good influence of both is perverted or circumvented, and society suffers a loss that cannot be estimated.

Home and school become mutually helpful by routine and cultivating obedience. Disobedience at home does not tend to obedience at school; neither does loose government in school increase the spirit of obedience at home. The child who learns to resist the rules that strict conformity to the rules of the school is indispensable, enter it with self-respect and reverence for teachers, such as never appear when instructors are objects of suspicion or antagonism by parents. On the other hand, pupils who receive no higher conceptions of home by attendance at school—no lessons that magnify the mission of parents and the duties of children—do not become more obedient sons and daughters in consequence of their school opportunities.

An illustration is at hand. Two restless pupils sit idly by, their highest exertion being no relief from their persistent mischief. Knowing the parents very well, the two families being at the antipodes in regard to government, the teacher resolves to try the experiment of sending them home for the next misdeed. On the following day, about the middle of the forenoon, an opportunity occurs for the trial. John and Henry go to school as usual, and the teacher stops him on the floor and inquires before the school: "John, what did your parents say to you?" "Nothing," was his reply. "Did you tell them that you were sent home for misdeed?" "Yes, Sir," did they not improve you for it and advise you to do better?" "They didn't say nothing," "Then you are violating the rules of the school. I will administer the punishment which your parents ought to have inflicted yesterday."

Henry leaves the room crying; John leaves it laughing. In less than one hour Henry returns with this message from his very excellent and faithful mother: "Mother sent me back and told me to tell you that she had punished me for my disobedience, and to ask your forgiveness, and promise to obey you henceforth." "I forgive you," says the teacher; "take your seat and let me tell you that you can never love and respect your good mother too much." But John does not put in his appearance till next day, and then about twenty minutes late. The teacher stops him on the floor and inquires before the school: "John, what did your parents say to you?" "Nothing," was his reply. "Did you tell them that you were sent home for misdeed?" "Yes, Sir," did they not improve you for it and advise you to do better?" "They didn't say nothing," "Then you are violating the rules of the school. I will administer the punishment which your parents ought to have inflicted yesterday."

It is quite certain that John's parents did not assist the school by their family government. They furnished the means of temptation, and annoyed the teacher and hindered his government more difficult. But Henry's mother co-operated with the teacher for the highest good of her son, and the school. This incident illustrates how one home helps school, while another hinders, by requiring or not requiring obedience. There is no doubt Henry's home was an aid to the school, while John's was a hindrance. It is a question whether John's home was at all improved by the school, while it is certain that the school was injured by his home.

The virtue of obedience cannot be overrated in home and school. It is an absolute condition of efficient work and eminent success. It is to be sought and insisted on before the alphabet, grammar and arithmetic. As obedience lays the foundation of symmetrical character and true progress, so disobedience disorganizes character, hinders progress, and invites certain failure.

Home and school may be mutually helpful by cultivating the obedient habits of boys and girls. The inspired admonition to parents, "provoke not your children to wrath," might be addressed to the teachers with equal propriety. "Wrath" is of frequent occurrence. That disposition of temper, is susceptible to education is scarcely made a subject of thought. Many parents and teachers are ignorant of the nature of the virtue. "Temper is one half of Christianity." Yet the words are true. The best time to train this disposition is in early life and the best place to do it is in home and school. The child who is obedient in home and school, is more likely to realize how much our schools are hindered by the widespread disregard of this specialty in families. Multitudes of pupils come from homes in which the chief interest is made to extend to the school. Even where unusual intelligence characterizes its members there is often a wretched lack of harmony. Parents fret and scold, and the children imitate the home and turn into both the born and the unborn spirit of rebellion and make the best of it. The help and aid of the matter must be duly considered, and appreciated.

A spirit of friendly interest and intercourse between school and home is a mutual benefit. It would be better if parents took a more active interest in the school. The general interest in the great cause of education is well developed in our country. Any measure requiring the support of the voters, any great educational system receives a quick and hearty response from them. But too often parents show little interest in the particular school attended by their children. The teachers, and their conceptions are but slight of the methods by which their sons and daughters are being trained for life's duties. All teachers are being trained for life's duties. All teachers are being trained for life's duties. All teachers are being trained for life's duties.

The welfare of the schools and the progress of the children. Such practical exhibition of interest and sympathy do good all round—to the children whose ambition is stimulated, to the teacher who loves to feel that his or her work is appreciated, and, perhaps, as much as anywhere, to the parents themselves. In this form new estimates of their own responsibility, and who come into closer touch with the progress of the age in educational methods.

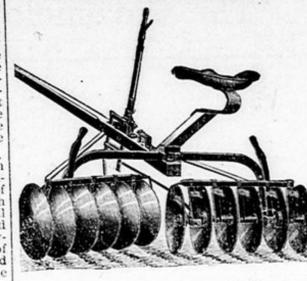

Developing the spirit of self-help assists both part of parents and competent parents and teachers aim to make girls and boys self-reliant and efficient. Children who are required to perform prescribed daily tasks at home, in the routine of their own responsibility, and who come into closer touch with the progress of the age in educational methods.
