HUMOR

HIS MEMORY RETURNED.

He Wanted a Snow Shovel, as Surmised by the Storekeeper.

He stopped in front of a hardware store for a moment and looked all around and then carried his hand to his head like a man who had forgotten something. Then he slowly entered the store and looked around and shook his head.

"You want something?" observed the clerk as he came forward.

"I do."

"But for the moment you have forgotten what it is?"

"That's exactly the case. I knew when I left the house, but it has gone from my head now. If you'd offer me a hundred dollars, I couldn't remember what I started after."

"We have lots of such cases, and we solve them in a moment. Here is what you want."

And he passed behind a lot of stoves and dragged out a big snow shovel and placed it in the other's hands and said:

"Thirty-five cents, please, and you'll find the material of the best."

"By George! By George!" exclaimed the customer. "But that's exactly what I wanted! What a curious thing memory is. I wanted a snow shovel, and now I'll take it home and put it in the cellar, and if my neighbors don't keep their walks clean I'll complain to the police."—Chicago News.

Did Not Count.

There is a small boy in Pittsburg who is intensely patriotic and who is, as a rule, a very well informed Sunday school student. Not long ago there were some visitors, and Tommy's teacher, wishing to show off her class to the best advantage, called upon him to answer a series of questions. All went well until the very usual one, "Who was the first man?"

"George Washington—first in war, first in"—Tommy began enthusiastically, but the teacher hastily interrupted.

"No, no, dear! You mean Adam, don't you?"

"Oh, if you are talking about adages, I s'pose he might be," admitted Tommy.—Harper's Weekly.

Which?

Once upon a time two young women came to a wise theatrical manager and applied for positions as stars.

"It is not our custom to engage stars who have had no dramatic experience," he said. "And neither of you has been on the stage?"

"No, sir," they replied.

"Then what qualifications do you possess?"

"I, sir," said the first young woman, "have ambition and a future."

"I, sir," said the second young woman, "have ambition and a past which would make copy."

And so the manager made out a contract for one of them.—Judge.

Terrible Revenge.

Mme. Labarue—I saw Mme. Paul having a great altercation with your cook this afternoon.

Mme. Vincent—Yes; I am not altogether surprised. Just fancy, she had the nerve to copy my last new hat!

Mme. Labarue—Well, what did you do?

Mme. Vincent—I gave mine to the cook.—Pele Mele.

The Joy of It.

Miss Jenks—I don't see why you consider it a pleasure to hear him preach. I understand he always talks about fire and brimstone.

Miss Farrasy—Exactly! And it's such a pleasure to think of what's in store for some people, you know.—Philadelphia Press.

Hitting Home.

Goodley—Oh, come, now! I wouldn't call him a cad.

Boorisch—No? Well, what is your idea of a cad?

Goodley—Well, usually it is a fellow who is forever calling somebody else one.—Catholic Standard and Times.

Comforting Thought!

"Shocking weather, Giles." "It be main bad, squire, but better than none at all, say Oi!"

Misanthropic Bliss.

"I don't possess," the cynic said, "A single friend on earth." And yet he lifted up his head And smiled in chilly mirth.

"I hear no scandal," he explained; "I get no tips that fail; I mourn no comradeship disdained; I hear no hard luck tale.

"From crowds in the department store I turn with footsteps free. I make no gifts—not any more—And none make gifts to me.

"I hide away lest I may strike Some folly or some sham And live quite happy—happy like An oyster or a clam!"

—Washington Star.

For Thin, Poor Blood

You can trust a medicine tested 60 years! Sixty years of experience, think of that! Experience with Ayer's Sarsaparilla; the original Sarsaparilla; the Sarsaparilla the doctors endorse for thin blood, weak nerves, general debility.

But even this grand old medicine cannot do its best work if the liver is inactive and the bowels constipated. For the best possible results, you should take laxative doses of Ayer's Pills while taking the Sarsaparilla.

Made by J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass. Also manufacturers of: HAIR VIGOR, AGUE CURE, CHERRY PECTORAL.

We have no secrets! We publish the formulas of all our medicines.
