Bruce County Farmer Finds This Grim Note Upon the Table.

Kincardine, Aug. 12.-When J. Shelton, a respectable but close-fisted granger, of Armow, six miles from Kincardine, returned to his house on-Friday morning, after being out in the fields only half an hour he found

Shelton's wife, Martha Ann, and his daughter, Nora Ellen, had left the house and farm, taking with them a couple of grips packed with

Shelton reported the matter to the police to-day, and asked that something be done to locate the runaways. It was ascertained that Mrs. Shelton and her daughter, who is 18 years of age, took a boat on Friday afternoon for Detroit, in the company of a man who wore on the occasion a fine bunch of black whiskers. Whether the whiskers were faked is not known. The man is supposed to be the finance of the younger woman.

Mrs. Shelton and her daughter were well thought of by the neighbors. who are unable to account for the elopement, except to say that Shelton was a "tightwad." They took no money with them, except the butter and eggs.

JOKE ON THE EDITOR. - Stratford Herald :- Newspaper readers are iamilar with the story or the visiting preacher, who, among the announcements read a sympathetic one about the affliction that had befallen a leading member of the congregation in the death of his wife, whose funeral was impending. The preacher could not understand the levity that pervaded the congregation until he learned at the close of the service that he had read a year-old announcment which by queer chance still lingered on the preacher's desk. and that the bereaved husband had been All druggists should be able to sup- present in the congregation with his second bride. An almost parallel case has just turned up in Berlin. only it is a newspaper, the Telegraph which has been victimized. Some body got the Telegraph to print the particulars of the sudden death of the wife of F. G. Gardiner. the edition being no sooner off the press than the amazed editor learned that the item was an account of the sudden death of the citizen's first wife twelve years ago. The Telegraph had to say it was delighted that the present Mrs. Gardiner did not suffer an untimely death, and it apologized for the "very regrettable character" of its mistake, We would wager, however, that Berlin citizens displayed levity similar to that of the congregation in the other story.

> Three automobiles plying up and down Durham street on Tuesday gave Walkerton a rather citified look. The old town in fact takes to city ways like a duck to an orphant chick. All we need is a slight increase in population and we can readily be palmed off as an urban municipality. Two or three automobiles make a greater stir on the front street than a quiet citizen likes to think about. Especially is this the case when several horses are tied along the route where the autos pass. The newspaper men always lock for a few runaways when the autos commence to scorch and they are rarely disappoint. ed. An auto is the best instigator of news a paper has, and many a hairrising item can trace its source back to a reckless chaffeur and a timid horse .- Bruce Times.
