LOCAL.

PROFESSOR KONOLD, music teacher, met with an accident on Monday last driving from Priceville to his home near the Glen. He had a wild horse in a cart and the animal got frightened at the sight of an engine on the new C. P. R. Line and attempted to run away. Mr. Konold had presence of mind enough to handle the reins well but in pulling him up short the horse fell forward, turned a complete somersault, broke his leg, and died in a few minutes just where he fell. Mr. Konold was pitched out of the cart and struck the frozen ground with such force that he will be sore for a few days. The professor was on duty again next day apparently but little the worse.

A MEETING of Temperance workers was held in the Baptist church on Tuesday night. There was considerable discussion about holding Local Option meetings but no definite action. A meeting will be held next Tuesday night in the Presbyterian church when the subject will be further discussed. We were not present, but understand there was considerable enthusiasm. People should be temperate in discussing temperance. The great bulk of the electors have already decided which way they'll vote. It is only those who are indifferent enough not to vote at all, and those who are battling between two opinions that remain to be gathered in. An intemperate expression may turn these one way or the other, because we say that temperance people of all people should be temperate in their utterances and their actions. The women will nearly all vote the one way, hence the women have very little to do with their own sex. Most men refuse to be driven by women, and they are almost sure to balk if any such attempt be made, therefore women who have the cause of temperance at heart will gain ground by keeping clear of a bdky man. On the other hand a man with little or no standing in the community will do more harm than good if he undertakes to air himself. We refer many to the fourth verse of the third chapter of Hezekiah, and if they do exactly what they find there they'll come out safe.
