Twenty-one years ago the Baptist chapel here was dedicated and the event was commemorated on Sunday when successful anniversary services were held, very able sermons being preached by Rev. J. A. The Wrong Way.

The late John C. Paige had at one time as a protege the son of a very particular friend, a pleasant, gentlemanly young fellow, but always ready to make a bet or to take a hand in a quiet game, and on this account it was thought best by his parents to send him to Boston on a limited income with the hope of breaking away from old associates and of getting some business energy into him.

Mr. Paige gave him some good, wholesome advice and started him along in business, particularly instructing him to "get his name before the public to let the people know he was living," etc.

Not very long after this Boston debut Mr. Paige very late one evening was requested to call at a nearby police station. The young man, it appeared, had got into a very noisy game and was arrested, but not before he had been cleaned out of everything he possessed.

"Well, young man," said Mr. Paige, "this is nice, isn't it?"

"Well, sir, you told me to get my name before the public."

"Oh, yes," Mr. Paige replied, "but I didn't tell you to have a judge and jury go with it to fix the advertising rates."—Boston Herald.

The Queen of Spiders.

The queen of spiders—the largest, handsomest and most capable workman of her tribe—is the orange-yellow and black creature known as orange argiope. Hers are the most beautiful cobwebs made, hung low to catch the innumerable insects required for a rather large appetite, and you find them among the bushes and vines and in the fields. Argiope captures and ties up her victims as ably as a cowboy might do with a lasso, and she excels the cowboy by manufacturing her own rope as she goes.

When to Go Home.

From the Bluffton, Ind., Banner: "When tired out, go home. When you want consolation, go home. When you want fun, go home. When to show others that you have reformed, go home and let your family get acquainted with the fact. When you want to show yourself at your best go home and do the act there. When you feel like being extra liberal go home and practice on your wife and children first. When you want to shine with extra brilliancy go home and light up the whole household." To which we would add, when you have a cold go home and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and a quick cure is certain. For sale at Parker's Drug Store.
