a confession.
 "Then I'll charge them both with the murder," the inspector growled vindictively. "And, by —, they'll both go to trial unless somebody comes through. If it's my last act on earth, I'm going to get the man who shot Eddie Griggs."

Burke, after the lawyer had left him watched the door expectantly for the coming of Aggie Lynch, whom he had ordered brought before him. But when at last Dan appeared and stood aside to permit her passing into the office, the inspector gasped at the unexpectedness of the vision. The next instant the inspector forgot his surprise in a sincere, almost ardent admiration.

The girl was rather short, but of a slender elegance of form that was ravishing. Her costume had about it an indubitable air, a finality of perfection in its kind. On another it might have appeared perhaps the merest trifle garish. But that fault was made into a virtue by the correcting innocence of the girl's face. It was a childish face, childish in the exquisite smoothness of the soft, pink skin, childish in the wondering stare of the blue eyes, now so widely opened in dismay, childish in the wistful drooping of the rosebud mouth.

"Now, then, my girl," Burke said roughly. "I want to know—"

There came a change, wrought in the twinkling of an eye. The tiny, trimly shod foot of the girl rose and fell in a wrathful stamp.

"What do you mean by this outrage?" she stormed. Her voice was low and rich, with a charming roundness that seemed the very hallmark of gentility. "I demand my instant release."

"Wait a minute," Burke remonstrated. "Wait a minute!"

"You wait!" she cried violently. "You just wait, I tell you, until my papa hears of this!"

"Who is your papa?"

"I shan't tell you," came the petulant retort from the girl. "You would probably give my name to the reporters. If it ever got into the newspapers my family would die of shame!"

"Now, the easiest way out for both of us is for you to tell me just who you are. You see, young lady, you were found in the house of a notorious crook."

"How perfectly absurd! I was calling on Miss Mary Turner."

"How did you come to meet her anyhow?"

"I was introduced to Miss Turner by Mr. Richard Gilder. Perhaps you have heard of his father, the owner of the Emporium."

"Oh, yes, I've heard of his father and of him too."

"Then you must see at once that you are entirely mistaken in this matter."

"You see, young lady, the fact is that even if you were introduced to Miss Turner by young Mr. Gilder this same Mary Turner herself is an ex-convict, and she's just been arrested for murder."

"Murder!" the girl gasped.

"Yes. You see, if there's a mistake about you you don't want it to go any further—not a mite further, that's sure. So, you see, now, that's one of the reasons why I must know just who you are."

"You should have told me all about this horrid thing in the first place." Now the girl's manner was transformed. She smiled wistfully on the inspector and spoke with a simplicity that was peculiarly potent in its effect on the official.

"My name is Helen Travers West," she announced.

"Not the daughter of the railway president?"

"Yes," the girl admitted. "Oh, please don't tell any one," she begged prettily. "Surely, sir, you see now quite plainly why it must never be known by any one in all the wide, wide world that I have ever been brought to this perfectly dreadful place—though you have been quite nice. Please let me go home." She plucked a minute handkerchief from her hand bag, put it to her eyes and began to sob quietly.

The burly inspector of police was moved to quick sympathy.

"That's all right, little lady," he exclaimed cheerfully. "Now, don't you be worried, not a little bit. Take it from me, Miss West. Just go ahead and tell me all you know about this Turner woman. Did you see her yesterday?"

The girl's sobs ceased. After a final dab with the minute handkerchief she leaned forward a little toward the inspector and proceeded to put a question to him with great earnestness.

"Will you let me go home as soon as I've told you the twenty little I know?"

"Yes," Burke agreed promptly, with an encouraging smile. He added as one might to an alarmed child, "No one is going to hurt you, young lady."

"Well, then, you see, it was this way," began the brisk explanation.

"Mr. Gilder was calling on me one afternoon, and he said to me then that he knew a very charming young woman who—"

Here the speech ended abruptly, and once again the handkerchief was brought into play as the sobbing broke forth with increased violence. Presently the girl's voice rose in a wail.

"Oh, this is dreadful—dreadful!" in the final word the wail broke to a moan.

AGRICULTURAL BOARD HOLDS THIRD ANNUAL MEETING.

In the office of the Department of Agriculture in Markdale on January 31, was held the third annual meeting of the Grey County Board of Agriculture. This body is made up of two delegates from each Farmers' Club in the county. Their object is to further the best interests of the farmers in the county and assist them to make the farm as agreeable and profitable as possible.

Delegates were present from the following clubs: Hanover, Glencl Centre, Strathairn, Markdale, Bognor, and Kilsyth. Many others could not be present on account of the weather and the roads. Secretary H.C. Duff in presenting his report said that already many farmers had spoken for labor assistance for 1914 and it was not stated just what would be done. During the past year a stock census of the county had been taken, and it is being published in pamphlet form for distribution amongst the farmers of the county. Considerable interest was manifested in the account of the exhibit at Toronto and the stock from the county which won at Guelph.

In speaking of Co-operation Mr. T. H. Binnie traced the different methods of co-operation and warned those present that the choice of managers was one of the hardest problems in the working out of the co-operation scheme. The old method was to sell shares to get the capital to start with. The new scheme is for every member to give a promissory note payable on demand for a certain sum and these notes to be used to get the money required from the banks. In this way no member has any cash tied up in the business and no interest has to be paid unless the money is in actual use. Mr. J. W. Blyth of Varney was present and gave a short outline of the new organization work which is being worked out by the Grange.

Mr. F. C. Hart, head of the new Co-operation and Markets branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, was present, and gave a short address on the work of the farmers' clubs in Waterloo county. Many valuable pointers were given to those present. He also briefly outlined the work which the new branch hoped to follow during the next year or so.

The following members were elected to the Executive: Chairman, Mr. Brownlee; Secretary, T. H. Binnie, Priceville; H. C. Duff and Messrs. Dolphin, Breen and Moffat. House to rent

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

A pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David McAuliffe on Monday of last week, when the Roman Catholic choir and a number of Mrs. McAuliffe's friends expressed appreciation for her services as organist. The address was read by Mr. Dan McGrath, and the presentation made by Misses Maggie McAuliffe and Irene McPhee. The following is the address:

Dear Mrs. McAuliffe,—The members of St. Patrick's church choir have gathered here this evening to spend an hour with you, and take this opportunity of thanking you for the valuable service you have rendered as organist. We know that it costs you no small amount of trouble and inconvenience to fill this position, which you have always done cheerfully and with a good spirit, consequently we wish to show our appreciation of your service, and ask you to accept this muff, cross and set of silver spoons, not for their minor value, but as something of remembrance and as significance of the esteem in which you are held by the choir.

Signed,—Misses Margaret McAuliffe, Irene McPhee.

Mrs. McAuliffe made a brief reply as follows: "My dear Friends,—With a heart truly grateful I sincerely thank you one and all for the beautiful presents and this kind address which you have given me this evening, of which I feel so unworthy. My prayers shall be that God may open for each one of you the golden gates of Paradise to admit you all into eternal bliss."

The C.N.R. will put a gas-electric train on its line from Harrowsmith to Kingston.

Captain H. D. Munn, of London, who is in Montreal, announces that he has organized a syndicate with Lord Lascelles as chairman to develop the trade in furs, ivory and oil in the Baffin's Land district. He will ask the Government to assist him in establishing a relief post at Melville Island where the crew of the Stefansson ship "Karluk" may head for.
