REBUKE BY SARCASM.

About the Poorest Place to Use It is in the Classroom.

In a well known Boston school there was a boy conspicuously dull at his Latin. He was a straightforward fellow and a gentleman by birth and breeding, but he was a bungler at syntax.

One morning he had tangled himself in a simple phrase. The teacher asked a question that should have cleared him. But the poor lad did not know the answer.

Then the teacher leaned back in his chair, rolled his gray eyes to the ceiling and said for all the class to hear, "I have been told that it is a hard thing to stuff a wildcat with butter, particularly if you have to do it with a hot awl, but that is child's play compared with putting Latin in a boy like this."

Of course the laugh came, but as the boys laughed they despised the teacher.

"Sarcasm," said Carlyle, "is the language of the devil." Be that as it may, it has turned many a schoolroom into a place of torment.

A boy may be too dull to be in school, but while allowed to be there he can never be dull enough to justify a knife thrust from one whose first duty is to help and cheer him.—Boston Herald.

Degeneration of Names.

Thomas Hardy showed his keen eye for the characteristic in giving his heroine the distinguished name of D'Urberville, corrupted by long rustic wear to Darbyfield. But many stately English names have gone further down hill than that, for example the mean and trivial Snooks, which has little to recall Sevenoaks. One would suppose that an easy prize winner in a degeneration race, yet Professor Weekley, in his book on the romance of English names, finds some that have descended as far and started higher. There is nothing very distinguished, for example, about Codin a novelist would hardly dare use it save for a comic figure. As Quodling it is merely queer. As Querdling it begins to seem foreign, and the etymologist can make a shrewd guess where he is coming out; while Querdelyon is but the thinnest of masks for the illustrious Norman original, Coeur de Lion. In England the meanest little names may have the greatest history, especially if they started as French, which fares badly on English tongues.

KEPHALDOL

CURES PAIN, BUT DOES NOT AFFECT THE HEART.

First of all, it may be well to mention that "Kephaldol" is the prescription of one of the world's greatest nerve specialists—the famous Herr Doctor Stohr of Vienna, Austria.

He has used Kephaldol in his private practice and hospital clinics, in thousands of cases of Headaches, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuritis, La Grippe, and other forms of Nerve Exhaustion.

The mere fact that Dr. Stohr originated "Kephaldol" is the only recommendation needed by most physicians and surgeons to commend the formula to their attention.

"Kephaldol" is the only pain-relieving remedy used by Dr. Stohr, because it is the only one that does not affect the heart or other organs and may be taken with perfect safety until a complete cure results.

"Kephaldol" Tablets may be obtained at most drug stores in 50c. tubes, or they will be sent on receipt of price by Kephaldol Limited, 31 Latour St., Montreal.

WHEN YOU MEET KINGS

ETIQUETTE WITH ROYALTY IS A TICKLISH BUSINESS.

For Instance You Must Remove Your Hat and Stand Up Until Invited to Sit Down—Similarly You Must Never Ask a Princess to Dance With You Nor Yet Turn Down a Prince.

The King himself has many royal privileges, for as "the fountain of honor and justice" he alone can create title or grant pardons, and it is he who in the name of the nation is supposed to make all treaties with foreign powers, or to declare war. In his own person he is beyond the reach of the bailiff or the power of the policeman, for he pays no taxes and is answerable for no debts, and is above all laws, as, theoretically, "the King can do no wrong."

Nowadays, however, the King exercises his public prerogative almost entirely by the advice of his Ministers, and it is chiefly in private and social life that the personal privileges of the sovereign and the members of the royal family are most noticeable.

In the presence of royalty, with the exception of a few well-known individuals, in whose cases special privileges have been made by royal grant in return for notable services, no gentleman, unless he is an officer on duty may remain with his head covered, nor may anyone sit down until royalty is seated, and requests them to be seated.

No one may address a member of the royal family unless first spoken to, nor enter a room where any royal person is present, unless invited to do so, nor leave it without their permission.

Perhaps nowhere more than in the ballroom are the privileges of princes and princesses so rigidly observed. No one may commence dancing until the royal party have opened the ball, and at one time there was a rule, now seldom enforced, that no other person could dance in a round dance when any royalty had taken the floor.

A prince can invite any lady to be his partner, and his invitation is a command which cannot be refused, but no one except a prince can ask a princess to dance, as she chooses her own partners.

At an impromptu dance given at a big house in the South of England, which had been hurriedly arranged to amuse a royal duke and his daughters, some of the guests, who had very little experience of court etiquette, had rather an anxious time.

It was no easy matter to stop dancing without committing a dreadful breach of etiquette in standing with one's back to one of the royal party who might be seated behind you.

The duke was a vigorous dancer, and in the middle of a dance collided violently with a youthful gentleman in a pink coat, who was dancing with his mother, who was a singularly attractive lady and a well-known beauty in the neighborhood.

The young sportsman so far forgot himself as to ejaculate a very audible and explosive expression of disgust, and, when at the end of the dance, he saw the duke advancing towards him, he began to think he would be called on to make a very humble apology.

The duke, however, began by apologizing most handsomely for his own clumsiness, and then requested that he would introduce him to the lady he had been dancing with, so that he might apologize to her, too. The request was a command, and the duke spent most of the rest of the evening dancing with her, so his apologies must have been ample.

He was more fortunate than a royal prince who, at a Yeomanry ball in the Midlands paid so much attention to the pretty wife of a fox-hunting squire that the husband became seriously annoyed, and took advantage of his royal highness being down to supper, to order his carriage and to remove his wife from the ball at an early hour.

Half-way down the avenue, the carriage was overtaken by one of the royal suite, who had galloped after them with the prince's imperious request that the lady should return.

But the choleric squire had no regard for royal etiquette or for the privileges of princes, for, showing his head out of the carriage window, he shouted to the astonished equerry, who awaited his reply:

"Give my compliments to the prince, and tell him my wife is going home with her husband—and that he can go to the dickens!" and promptly drove off as fast as his horses could go.

On another occasion one guest committed a dreadful "faux pas." He was a young gentleman, dressed in the blue coat and brass buttons of the Beaufort Hunt, and was evidently staying in the house, and apparently on very friendly terms with the royal party.

He noticed the princess sitting out a dance, talking to another lady, and, after some hesitation walked up to her in her retired corner, where he made a low bow and evidently said something to the princess. For a moment the princess seemed to be taken by surprise, then, drawing herself up rather stiffly, she made some reply to the gentleman which caused him to retreat hurriedly, blushing to the roots of his hair.

He had committed the indiscretion of asking a princess to dance. But shortly afterwards, he was seen wreathed in smiles and dancing with the princess, who, with her usual good nature, had made him happy by sending him an invitation to be her partner.

This privilege of princesses in choosing their own partners is one which, perhaps, some young ladies might be prepared to envy. At the same time, it is possible that the younger princesses may, on some occasion and in some cases wish that they could waive their royal privilege.

THIS STOMACH REMEDY REMARKABLY SUCCESSFUL.

You know us—your home druggist. You know we wouldn't guarantee any remedy to relieve indigestion or dyspepsia, or money back, unless we felt the utmost confidence in that remedy. Therefore, when we offer you Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets with this proof of our faith in them, it leaves you no room for hesitation or doubt.

The remarkable success of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets is due to the fact that they contain, among other things, Bismuth and Pepsin, two ingredients endorsed by the medical profession as invaluable in the treatment of stomach ills. They soothe the inflamed stomach, check heartburn and distress, stimulate the secretion of gastric juice, aid in rapid and comfortable digestion of the food, and convert it into rich, red blood. In a short time they tend to restore the stomach to a naturally comfortable, easy-acting, healthy state. They also benefit the bowels.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us. Three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00. Macfarlane & Co.

ONE PLEADS GUILTY; TWO WILL FIGHT.

Kenneth Vaughan, John McKenzie, and Jos. Hall, of Glenelg, were before Magistrates Armstrong and Ennis on Monday evening on the charge of furious driving on the public highway causing bodily injury to Miss Gertie Walker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Walker, on the night of March 3rd. The charge was laid under Sec. 285 of the Criminal Code, and is a serious offence, which, if parties were found guilty, were liable to a term of two years' imprisonment.

Mr. W. D. Henry, who was counsel for the complainant, Mr. Frank Dinsmore, cousin of Miss Walker, announced that if the young men would plead guilty the charge would be reduced to that of Sec. 7, Chap. 47 of the Provincial Statutes, and by paying a fine and the costs of the case no further action would be taken. Joe Hall agreed to this lenient proposal, pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $10 and costs, in all $17.95. Vaughan and McKenzie refused to accept this proposition, so the magistrates committed them for trial and the case will be tried before a County Judge or a jury in Owen Sound, the date having not yet been decided upon. In the meantime they gave their bond for $500 each, as also did the father of each of the young men, as a guarantee of their appearance at court.

Messrs. W. H. Wright of Owen Sound, and P. McCullough are counsel for the defendants. Great interest has been excited in the case, and the old council chamber was packed to the doors on Monday evening. Miss Walker is still in a serious condition as a result of the injuries she received.—Markdale Standard.

THE REASON FEWER PEOPLE TAKE "SALTS."

We find the use of salts and other harsh physics is becoming less every year because more and more people are using Rexall Orderlies, which we and they firmly believe to be the best bowel remedy ever made. They taste so much like candy that even the children like them. At the same time they act so easily and naturally that there is no purging, griping or pain. They promptly remove the constipation and, by soothing and strengthening the bowels, make it less liable to occur again. We have the utmost faith in them. We know what they are made of and the pleasant, beneficial results that always follow their use.

You needn't take our word for it. If Rexall Orderlies don't help you—if they don't entirely relieve all your bowel troubles—come back and tell us and we'll give back your money. In vest pocket tin boxes, 10c, 25c, 50c.

You can buy Rexall Remedies only at The Rexall Stores, and in this town only of us. Macfarlane & Co.

BLYTH'S CORNERS.

We saw a robin for the first time this year one day last week, but he didn't appear to feel any too jubilant on the weather prospects.

Quite early in February, just to be accurate, the day of Nelson-Eden's sale, we saw two wild ducks going straight south. If they are wise, they had better stay there for awhile yet.

The prospect for a peaceful solution of Home Rule for Ireland, by to-day's date, is decidedly blue. From an independent standpoint, we admire the loyalty of the Orangemen, but certainly their reasoning power is being far outdistanced by their obstinacy.

Mr. Jas. Brown's sale to-day in Egremont was a great success for crowd. Exceptionally high prices ruled for stock of all kinds, with the exception of horses.

Rev. B. W. Smith of Clanbrassil, as announced in our last budget, occupied the pulpit in Knox church on Sunday last, and preached a most earnest, masterful and inspiring sermon from Matt. 14:1. and made a very favorable impression of his ability in both congregations, which we sincerely hope will be productive of good results.

Mr. Alex. Smith, Sr., we are sorry to report, is seriously ill at present with pneumonia and bronchitis, with small chance for recovery.

Mr. Jas. McVean is also under the doctor's care and is seriously ill from heart trouble and other complications.

In looking over the various school reports from time to time in The Chronicle columns, we have failed to see any from No. 14. We always think it a good sign in a teacher to take note of the progress made by the individual scholar.

Sunday next, March 29, Rev. Mr. _____, of Aurora, will occupy Knox pulpit, then on the following Monday night a united meeting of both congregations will be held in Amos church to decide on a minister.

We are glad to report the recovery to health again of the little year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Marshall, which was quite ill last week with pneumonia. Dr. Gun was the attending physician.

RHEUMATISM AND BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

Prof. Budlong was Quickly Relieved of Both Afflictions by Using Rheuma.

If you suffer from any form of Rheumatism, remember that RHEUMA goes to work quickly to remove the cause, not simply to relieve the distress. Many years' use has demonstrated that it goes to the seat of the disease and expels the poisonous matter through the natural channels—the kidneys, bowels, liver and skin.

"For many years I was troubled with Rheumatism, also with Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. I suffered awfully. Tried many advertised remedies. After using your truly remarkable preparation RHEUMA, I was fully cured."—Prof. C. J. Budlong, Sound View, Conn.

RHEUMA is guaranteed by Macfarlane & Co., who sell it for 50 cents a bottle.

The Japanese Cabinet is reported to have resigned.

Mrs. Florence Lewis of Collingwood, was arrested in Toronto on a charge of deserting her children.

John Norris, former manager of the New York Times, died Saturday at his home in Brooklyn.

Wallace Wilson, license inspector of East York since 1905, died suddenly of heart failure on Sunday last. He was in his 68th year and leaves a widow, two daughters and one son.

Principal Beaton was acquitted by Walkerville Public School Board of a charge of having made derogatory to the Roman Catholic religion.
