A Big Swallow.

A detective was testifying in the case of a woman shoplifter whom he had arrested in her own house.

"And, your honor," said he, "when I told her the charge she turned her back to me and swallowed a purse, six suits of silk underwear, a silver candlestick and a chafing dish, and"

"Rubbish! Are you crazy?" the magistrate interrupted.

"Excuse me. What I mean to say, your honor," explained the detective, "is that she swallowed the pawn tickets."

Might Be Worse.

An old woman was brought into a London hospital suffering from a poisoned leg. The house surgeon made a hurried examination. He was a man of blunt speech. "It will have to come off," he told her.

"What, not all of it?"

"The whole of it. I'm sorry to say," growled the house surgeon.

"Nothing else for it?"

"No other chance for you whatever," explained the house surgeon.

"Ah, well, thank heaven it's not my head."

Beethoven's Retort.

The retort of Beethoven to his stupid brother was in an interchange of cards. The brother had left his card at the musician's lodgings, and in his purse pride it read, "Johann van Beethoven, land proprietor." The musician returned the call by card, Ludwig van Beethoven, brain proprietor." It is not often the case that genius is fortunate in its brothers.

Pretty Bad Either Way.

"Oh, Mr. Speam, we want you to officiate at my marriage to Bill Speed."

"William Speed! A divorce! Never, my dear child, certainly not."

"Dear me! Do you mean, then that if you perform the ceremony I'll have to accept some inexperienced youth with no matrimonial training whatever?"

Sympathy.

To sympathize with a woman, weep with her; to sympathize with a man, swear with him.

PROPOSALS TO ACTRESSES.

Artiste Has Dressing-room Papered With Love Letters.

Proposals of marriage, from all and sundry, are almost daily occurrences with popular actresses, and they learn to take little or no notice of them. It is said that one actress has papered her boudoir with a choice selection of them, but no actress, surely, would scorn such a beautiful love letter as the following:

"Dear Miss, I don't 'ave enuf money to go to the theater often, but I went last nite an' seen you. I never see a lovelier lady in my life, an' never won't act so beautiful. I dreamt of you all nite, an' I shall carry your image in my 'art all my life. I am 'riting' at wonce becoss you are so beautiful that you will soon get to be famous, an' I shall not dare to 'rite you agen." The lady carries this letter in her purse, and can hardly read it without tears.

A letter treasured by Mr. Harry Randall, the well-known music hall comedian, is from one of the often very eccentric individuals known as "stage aspirants," and is thus worded: "I am thinking of following the trade (sic) of a comic singer, and after a look round have come to the conclusion that your style would suit me best. Please state your lowest terms by return of post, and note that if I do not hear from you by first thing to-morrow I shall apply elsewhere!"

But probably the following is unique. "Dear sir, I, the undersigned, shall be most happy to attend the play nightly which is now running at the Theatre and applaud vociferously, for 4s. a night. If you prefer to give this matter a week's trial before coming to a final decision, I will attend for the purpose of applauding vociferously for six nights, in consideration of a free pass and two half-pints, each evening."

Dreams That Differed.

They were seated in one of those sheltered nooks for which Brighton is famous. He had just proposed and been accepted, and in blissful accents they were discussing their future prospects.

"You know I am not a rich man, darling," said Edwin.

"Ah, I care for you, dear, not for wealth," answered Angelina, rapturously.

"And we shall have to begin our married life very humbly," he continued.

"What care I how humbly?" was the heroic response. "A small cottage in some secluded spot, with clematis climbing over the door, and a rose-clad summer-house, in which we may sit and talk—your Angey asks for nothing more."

"But, darling, I am afraid it won't run to a cottage. Two rooms and kitchen, perhaps, somewhere near the office, where rents are cheap, and—"

A cloud came over the scene. Angelina is still free.

Pekin's Temple of Heaven.

China's famous Temple of Heaven was formerly visited once a year by the emperor to give an account of his empire and its affairs during the previous twelve months. This was set forth in writing, and the manuscripts were then placed in the furnace and in that way consigned to the emperor in heaven. The Temple of Heaven is one of the most beautiful and interesting sights of picturesque Peking. The walls inclosing the temple, the royal apartments, the altar and the grounds are three miles in circumference, and the white marble structures with their blue and green procelain tiles have to be seen to be appreciated.

This Side Up.

This story is told of a well-known impressionist artist. A man who had brought one of his paintings wished his opinion on the hanging of the picture and invited him to dine. The artist expressed his approval of the background, of the height at which the canvas was hung, pronounced the light favorable—indeed, he said, there was only one particular in which he would suggest any change.

"And what is that?" inquired his host, solicitously.

"Why," said the artist, "I should hang it the other side up. I always have."

A Man's Tact.

Nobody but Mr. Henley would have asked such a question in the first place.

"Miss Fairley," he said, "if you could make yourself over what kind of hair and eyes would you have?"

"If I could make myself over," said Miss Fairley, "I would look just exactly as I do now."

"You would" exclaimed Henley in honest surprise, and to this day he can't understand why Miss Fairley thinks him a man of little taste and less tact.

New Iron Kettles.

The best way to prepare a new iron kettle for use is to fill it with clean potato peelings, boil them for an hour or more, then wash the kettle with hot water, wipe it dry and rub it with a little lard; repeat the rubbing for half a dozen times after using. In this way you will prevent rust and all annoyances liable to occur with the use of a new kettle.

Agreed With Him.

An old man said to a youth: "My boy, when I was your age I thought, like you, that I knew it all, but now I have reached the conclusion that I knew nothing."

The youth, lighting a cigarette, answered carelessly:

"H'm! I reached that conclusion about you some years ago."

Needed Practice.

"Little girls should be seen and not heard, Ethel."

"I know, mamma. But if I'm going to be a lady when I grow up I've got to begin practicing talking some time, you know."
